One Man, Twice

Jones County Sheriff Brown Yates reports two arrests that required jailing a man over the past week, and one man provided both occasions. Shortly after making bond on these two charges Sholar was back in the local pokey, charged with plain public drunkenness.

Hoyal Miller Asks Judge Larkins to Force Elridge Sumrell to Serve Him In His Cafe Under Civil Rights Act

Lawyers for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People have filed suit in the Eastern North Carolina District Federal Courts in behalf of Hoyal Miller, Beaver Creek colored man, and two Beaufort County colored people.

The suits have been filed under the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and allege that Trenton Restaurant owner Elridge Sumrell refused to feed the three in his cafe in September of this year.

Miller was one of Jones County's first colored parents to move his children into the county's white schools, and he was an unsuccessful candidate this spring on the Democratic ticket for the county board of education.

Last year Miller reported to county, state and federal authorities that some one had thrown a stick of dynamite in his front yard on the Beasley Town Road in the northern tip of the county. His home and mail box were damaged by an explosion.

This year Miller's son, Melwood, one of the transferees into the white school system, was indicted for assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, after he had shot several holes in a station wagon that passed his home in which six white high school students were riding. None was hit.

Young Miller was expelled from the county's schools for this and other involvements with school officials, and juvenile Judge Walter Henderson had ordered him sent to a reform school.

Henderson's order was set aside and remanded for further action on a technicality in Superior Court by Judge Joseph Parker at last month's term of court and the matter is still pending before Henderson.

Virginia Trio Building 100-Room Inn On Banks of Neuse South of Kinston

Monday Norman Groh of Norfolk announced that he and two other Tidewater Virginians would build a 100-room Holiday Inn on land leased from Dick Parker on the banks of Neuse River just south of Kinston.

Groh with James E. Rich Jr., owner of 21 supermarkets and 28 drive-in restaurants — including one on North East Street in Kinston, and Ralph James, a Hampton attorney and legislator will own and operate the facility.

Groh has been in Kinston frequently in the past two years putting together the Kinston Plaza shopping center which opened this fall.

Groh said the 772nd Holiday Inn being built in Kinston will be "very plush".

It will include four 3-room suites with kingsized beds, living room and color television, a 60-seat coffee shop, a 75-seat private club and a 25-seat restaurant with an unusually large kitchen to serve all three eating places.

The two-story motel will be in traditional style with cedar shake shingles and all will be expandable except the coffee shop and kitchen, and Groh said the kitchen is being built large enough in the beginning to take care of any reasonable expansion of the restaurant and private club.

Groh said that he and his associates realize that Kinston is not a tourist center at present and they will depend on commercial and industrial travellers for the bulk of their business in the motel, plus local support for the eating facilities, which will be outstandingly nice.

Construction is expected to begin about March 1st and completion around September

1st. The motel site is between four and four and a half acres and includes part of the old Cadillac Motel property, which caused Groh to admit:

"We realize we are starting off with a site that has a right lively reputation."

Accused Rapists to Have Psychiatric Tests in Goldsboro

This week Judge Elbert Peele Jr., presiding over Lenoir County Superior Court, has ordered the commitment of six Lenoir County colored men to the state hospital for insane in Goldsboro.

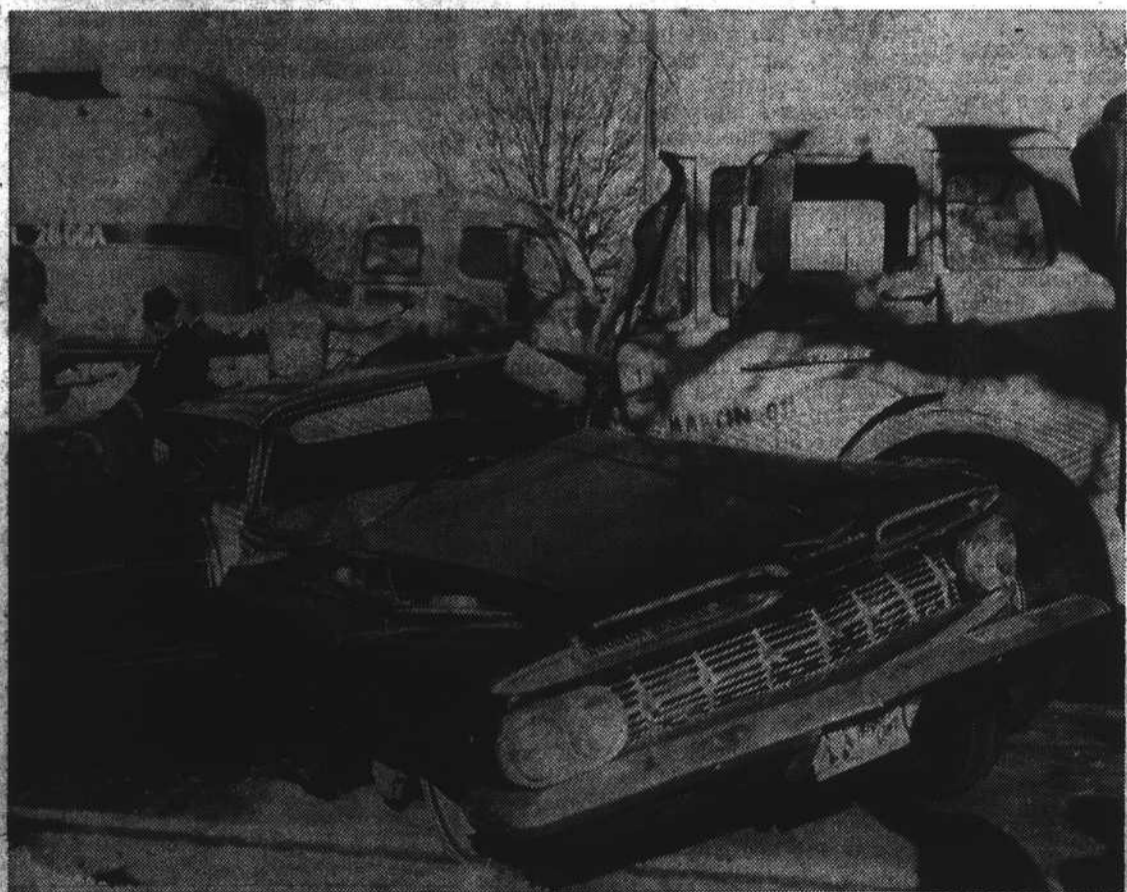

The purpose of the commitment is to determine if they are competent to stand trial for raping a Kinston girl on October 16th and robbing two Kinston boys on the same night.

The commitment to the hospital is for a 30-day period of examination and testing, after which if the doctors at the hospital certify that they are legally sane they will be returned to Kinston for trial on the capital charge.

Thursday Wreck Looked Worse Than It Really Was

At 10:30 last Thursday morning Mrs. Annie Wilkins Jones of Beulaville route 2 pulled out onto West Vernon Avenue from Pecan Lane — the entrance to Caswell Training School — directly into the path of a westbound truck of the Martin Oil Company driven by William Manley Baker of Kinston route 4. This picture shows the crushed condition of the Jones car after it had been dragged more than 50 feet down the highway by the heavily loaded truck.

Mrs. Jones, her four year-old son, Darren Keith, Mrs. Minnie Lee Gooding and her 19 year-old son, James Floyd, also of Beulaville route 2 were rushed to Kinston's Lenoir Memorial Hospital.

After treatment the Jones pair was transferred to the hospital at Camp Lejeune, but their condition at the time of transfer was reported "fine".

The Goodings were kept for observation in the local hospital but they also escaped with injuries in the category of serious but not critical.

Mrs. Jones was indicted by Patrolman Vernon Heath for failure to yield the right of way.
