His father-in-law Richard F. Hosking of 608 Walston Avenue had landed this monster mama in Neuse River just above Kinston and all he knew was that he had 15½ pounds of some kind of fish. As most folks familiar with Neuse River recognize quickly, Hosking had landed a grown German Carp, which was good news for sports fishermen since these sucker type fish vacuum up millions of eggs deposited by other fish every year, and this Mama Carp was full of her own variety of eggs and in a few more days would have put thousands of other carp in circulation.
