The traditional half-way point has been reached in this session of Congress with most of the major issues yet to be resolved.

On the unfinished business calendar are measures to liberalize social security benefits, ex-tend the poverty program, attack rising crime rates in the country, and a new package of civil rights proposals. In addition, one of the most pressing Congressional tasks relates to the passage of the thirteen regular appropriation bills. As of last week, most of the money bills were in the hearing stage in Senate and House appropriation commit-tees. Two of the money bills for fiscal 1968 had been enacted into law, two others were in Senate-House conferences, and the remaining nine bills were in

The appropriations status is indicative of the complexity of the task facing Congress on Federal expenditures and taxes. It is now apparent that if Congress votes for all of the Administration's spending requests for fis-cal 1968, revenues under the current tax structure will fall short of anticipated spending by as much as $20 billion. Such a deficit would fuel the fires of inflation and other economic prob-

This approach, however, over-looks the fact that domestic spending has been accelerating faster than defense spending with the addition of new Federal ssistance programs to fund a host of endeavors. Recently, a Federal compendieum to my desk giving a brief review of domestic assistance programs. Comparing it with the former edition, only 18 months old, demonstrated that the assistance catalog had grown in that short span from 414 pages to 701 pages. The truth is that there are marginal programs that should be phased out in preference to enacting new tax burdens for taxpayers who are often not con-vinced that the Federal Government must underwrite virtually all the endeavors that its citizens undertake to accomplish.

A reduction of Federal spending will take courageous action by Congress and the President, but it is the wiser course of action for a Government and a people dedicated to the principles of liberty. Economic freedom, including freedom from unnecessary taxes, is the basis of all our liberties. For this reason, I do not propose to vote for any increase in income taxes until the Federal Government takes some needed steps to reduce expenditures for non-essential purposes, and makes it clear that a tax increase is absolutely necessary Secretary McNamara's latest to our national defense.

so, it is time to think about your social security benefits and what you have to do to get them especially medicare, according to Adrian Hatfield, District Manager of Social Security Administration in New Bern.

Medicare consists of two kinds of protection, hospital insurance and medical insurance, which pays doctor bills. You get the basic hospital insurance as soon as you reach 65. But your doctor bill insurance will not begin with the month you reach 65 unless you apply for it during the 3-month period just before the month of your 65th birthday. If you sign up in the month of your birthday or in the following three months, you will have to wait for one to three months for your protection to begin, and if you delay beyond that, your next chance to enroll will not come until October 1967.

If you have already applied for social security or railroad retirement benefits, you will receive automatic notification to enroll for the doctor bill insurance. Your hospital insurance protection will begin automatically the month you reach 65.
