

Advice to Students on How to Go About Looking for Summertime Jobs

Now that school is almost over, many high school boys and girls will be looking for summer jobs in an office, a camp, a department store, a restaurant, or other places.

How that boy or girl looks during the interview — his personal appearance — will influence the prospective employer, reminds Mrs. Ruby Miller, extension clothing specialist, North Carolina State University.

If two applicants for a job had equal abilities and comparable training and experience, an employer would certainly choose the more attractive, better groomed person, she adds.

Good grooming includes the selection of becoming, appropriate clothing and accessories, good taste in the selection and use of cosmetics, as well as clean hands, manicured nails, shining hair and clean teeth.

"Not only does being well-groomed help to create a favorable impression on others," Mrs. Miller says, "but it contributes to the feeling of poise and self-assurance on the part of the person applying for the job."

Whether the job interview takes place on the school campus, in a local business office, or out of town, every effort should be made to put the best foot forward. Appropriate clothing should be an important consideration. The garment worn for the job interview should be relatively simple in style and design, but attractive and becoming to the wearer, the specialist believes. It is by no means necessary to buy a complete new outfit for the occasion, Mrs. Miller stresses. To do so may result in an unwise expenditure of money if time is limited and the purchase is not carefully considered in relation to the present wardrobe.

WHAT IS THE ANSWER?

by Henry E. Garrett, Ph.D.

Professor Emeritus, Psychology, Columbia University
Past President, American Psychological Association

Q: Dr. Garrett, what is meant by "the sour-grapes response"?

A: One who disparages what he can't have or can't get is said to be exhibiting the "the sour-grapes response". The phrase, of course, comes from the fable of the fox who, finding that he couldn't reach the grapes decided they were sour, anyway. Children who criticize other children or their possessions are often defending themselves by the 'sour-grapes response'. What they are saying is: "If I can't have it, it isn't any good".

THANKS . . .

But Just Remember

In this week's voting my name won't be on the ballot because I was lucky enough to wind up without Democratic opposition, but in November I do have Republican opposition, and from a mighty fine young man, who like myself is a native of Lenoir County.

I am firmly convinced that no matter how badly the national party may have strayed from our party's bedrock principles that North Carolina has been served well by Democratic Party officials.

This is my first effort in formal politics. I have enjoyed meeting a great many people in Greene, Jones and Lenoir counties in the weeks since I announced my candidacy. I hope to see all of you and many others before voting time rolls around in November. Meanwhile, keep my candidacy in mind, and remember that I will surely and sincerely appreciate your vote and support in November. Charles Larkins Jr., Democratic candidate for the North Carolina State Senate from the Fifth Senatorial District, which includes Jones, Greene and Lenoir counties.
