Another Kind of Harvest Season Now Upon East Carolina

This happy little girl is Deloyd Skinner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pat Skinner of Kinston route 1, who Wednesday morning was in charge of the "sampling department" as her mother and several others began the harvesting of some super - sweet delicious white scuppernong grapes on the Ronald Mewborn Farm in Upper Lenoir County. Grapes are no stranger to North Carolina and the Coastal Plain area has been noted since the first white man arrived for the delicacy of its grapes, some wild and some cultivated. But in recent years grapes have slowly arrived as a commercial crop on more and more Eastern Carolina Farms. This year Monte Carlo Wine Industries of New Brunswick, N. J. has opened a grape-buying station at Tull Hill's potato house in upper Lenoir County and is paying $250 per ton for white grapes such as these little Miss Skinner is sampling and $190 per ton for black grapes. What was it that Edward Fitzgerald had to say on the subject: "I wonder often what the vintner buys, one half so precious as the stuff they sell."

Harry Daughety Critically Wounded by Stick-up Men Monday Morning as Two Robberies Hit in Edge of Kinston

Harry Daughety, night attendant at the KLOC filling station just north of Kinston on the Greenville Highway, was critically injured at about 4:45 Monday morning as a pair of armed thieves committed their second robbery of the night, netting them about $190.

The first stick-up netted the thieves $250 from the office of the Kinstonian Motel just west of Kinston, where Night Clerk K. R. Tunstall was pushed into a closet and fired upon once when he started to come out of the closet, thinking the thieves had left. This took place at about 11:30 Sunday night. Tunstall and Daughety both said the men approached on foot, since neither heard or saw a car either before or after the men performed their criminal acts.

Tunstall described the pair as young Negroes, with one being about six feet tall, with light skin and a very high pitched voice.

Daughety underwent emergency surgery Monday morning to repair serious damage done in his lower stomach and right side by two bullets from a small caliber pistol.

Wednesday Daughety's condition was still listed as critical. He lost his right kidney and a great deal of blood as result of this assault.

Later Monday morning at about 7 a.m. two white men robbed an attendant at a filling station just west of New Bern of $1,500 and fled in a car with a Virginia license plate.

Diversification Pays Says Walter Jarman

A farmer should put his eggs in more than one basket, says Walter Jarman of Route 2, Trenton.

He says the farmer who practices diversification with his crops and livestock enterprises can have money coming in more frequently than the one crop farmer.

According to Fletcher Barber, Agricultural Extension Agent, Jarman keeps busy all year with tobacco, corn, soybeans, along with strawberries, cucumbers, and managing his hogs and home garden.

This year Jarman grew two acres of hot pepper and he was well pleased with the returns.

Indications are that more farmers will produce peppers next year, if contracts are available, Barber said.
