THE MONTGOMERY INDEPENDENT

All Right, Young Sir

If the editor had a college-age boy taking part in the savage disorders, there would first be a discussion, the key words of which would be do not, italicized and repeated more firmly, do not. If the behavior continued, there would be a second discussion in which this "All right, young sir, you have gentle point would be made indicated an insistence upon your right to freedom of action as an incipient — not to say insipid — adult. Therefore, in order not to compromise your integrity or independence, I am immediately withdrawing all financial support for your education. Write if you get work but not if you need bail."

This might rupture some happy homes, but it will serve to put anarchy on a self-sustaining basis. The parent is in an advanced state of dislodgement from his senses when he subsidizes what is occurring on many campuses. Nixon was gentle and polite when he called them "campus bums."
