TV Programs to Give Important Tobacco Facts

The latest development in tobacco production will be the topic of five special television programs planned for early January.

The programs will be presented by six extension specialists over four commercial television stations and the University's educational television system.

All phases of tobacco production will be covered. However, the emphasis will be on mechanization and the proper use of pesticides, according to Dr. William Collins, who is in charge of the extension tobacco program at North Carolina State University.

Appearing with Collins on the programs are two other tobacco specialists, S. N. Hawks and Ben Kittrell. Other participants will include Furney Todd, a plant pathologist; R. L. Robertson, an entomologist; and Rupert Watkins, an agricultural engineer.

The viewing schedule for the "tobacco workshops" is as follows:

Dies in Home Fire

Thirty three year-old Rufus L. Sutton of the Wooten Crossroads section died in a fire at his home early Christmas Day, which is believed to have started from a stove explosion. His wife and children escaped injury in the blaze which badly damaged their home. Sutton apparently was overcome by fumes as he also tried to reach the door, since his body was found near the front door by firemen when they had brought the blaze under control.

ESCAPEE CAUGHT

Walter Seymour Jr., sometime Kinstonian, was caught last week near the city after escaping Tuesday night from the State Prison Camp at Newport in Currituck County. Seymour is serving a sentence imposed in Lenoir County Superior Court for a series of offenses. He is also wanted in Illinois for stealing a truck.

PRESIDENT AND CONGRESS PLAYING DIRTY POOL WITH INFLATION PROBLEM BUDGET SHOWS

by Jack Rider

One neither has to have a degree in economics nor political science to understand that both President Nixon and congress are playing dirty pool on the inflation problem.

Politically each is pointing at the other and playing the old game of the kettle calling the pot black and collectively they look at the private sector of the nation which produces all wealth and try to hang the cause of inflation on higher wages for truck drivers and higher profits for widowed holders of a few shares of stock.

The tabulation included with this article was introduced into the December 22, 1970 Congressional Record by Congressman Neal Smith of Iowa, was pointing with pride to the accomplishments of the about to expire 91st congress.

At a time when labor unions and private corporations are being hung by the thumbs for asking more for their services and their capital the president and congress have come up with an increase of 11.6 per cent in federal spending, despite the fact that the current year's budget is expected to run well over $10 billion in the red!

When one looks a trifle more closely at this tabulation, and notes that it does not include the huge increases which become effective January 1st in the social security tax bite and further reflects that the increase already scheduled is likely to be considerably less than will finally be written into the law shortly after the 92nd congress is convened the magnitude of federal perfidy on the issue of inflation multiplies.

When one reflects further, as this tabulation shows, that but for the final reduction of almost $3 billion in the budget of the department of defense the increase would have been hideously higher.

And although the President and Congress both took some pleasure in this kind of tabulation, it needs to be born in mind that even after congress cut $1.8 billion off the President's budgetary requests, the budget still went up almost $15 billion.

Only two items in the tabulation showed decreases over the previous budget year: Defense, already noted and foreign aid which fell $24.6 million.

The smaller tabulation included with this article shows the adjusted per cent of the total budget allocated to defense and to assorted welfare, health, housing and education projects, lumped under the heading "Human Resources."

In 1957 the total federal expenditure was $69,433,078,427, which means that in that long ago year federal spending on these "Human Resources" projects totalled some more than $14,700,000,000. This year if the estimate proves reasonably accurate the federal expenditure in these several fields will exceed $59 billion.

This represents an increase in just 14 years of about $44 billion or more than 400 per cent, and yet a vast majority of the people in the nation still complain that not enough is being done in these several categories.

There are few unions or corporations capable of claiming a record of more than a 400 per cent increase in the past 14 years.

Today more than one person out of six who is working, is on either a federal, state, county, or city payroll. They total nearly 12 million. Another 22 million draw social security checks and about two million more draw either compensation or pension checks from the Veterans Administration. Still another six million draw welfare checks.

In many instances, of course, these lists overlap, reducing the total number to considerably less than the total of these figures might reflect. Many persons draw social security and welfare checks. Many others draw veteran and social security benefits and many who work in government draw veterans benefits for wartime injuries and disabilities.

So when the President or any economy-talking member of congress begins blowing the whistle on pay raises for union workers or profits of private enterprise they should first take a look at what's happening to the budgets of the nation's biggest business which they are "managing."
