COTTON FABRIC FOR ROADS DUE SOON

First Batches Will Be Used On Number of Resurfacing Projects, Baise Believes.

Raleigh, June 25—Several carloads of cotton fabric to be used in the construction of "cotton roads" in the state are expected to arrive here any day now, W. Vance Baise, chief highway engineer of the state highway and public works commission, said today. The bills of lading have already been received on three shipments of 8,800 yards each and on three other shipments of 30,000 yards each. A total of approximately 1,000,000 yards has already been allotted to North Carolina by the U. S. department of agriculture which is having the cotton material made and allotting to different states for experimentation in the construction of roads.

The first batch of this cotton fabric, which looks more like fish net than anything else, will probably be used on a number of resurfacing projects, Baise said, since the department of agriculture wants to learn how the fabric stands up on retreatment and repair projects in comparison, with the old type of bituminous surfacing. Later on, the fabric will also be used in the new surfacing of a number of roads, such as route 277 between Cherryville and Dallas in Gaston county, on the road between Clinton and Faison in Sampson and Duplin counties and on a new road in Warren county.

The purpose of the cotton fabric is as a binder between the sand-clay base and the bituminous surfacing, in order to hold it together
