

ZANE GREY'S BEST-SELLER IS SCREENED

Thrills of Hard-Riding Old West
Featured in 'Arizona Raiders.'

PALACE THEATRE SAT.
SEPTEMBER 19TH.

Larry Crabbe and Marsha Hunt head the cast of a new thrill-filled, hard-riding Zane Grey Western, "The Arizona Raiders," scheduled to open Saturday at the Palace Theatre. The story presents Crabbe fans with a plot packed with novel angles.

A rope is around the hero's neck as the picture opens; he makes a break and eludes the posse that has planned to hang him for supposed horse theft despite his protests of innocence. He has ridden only a short time before he comes on another group, intent on hanging a second man, Raymond Hatton. Surprising the party, he makes good Hatton's release.

The two become saddle-mates and head for Arizona and safety.

In the first Arizona town they reach, Hatton gets jailed for shooting up a saloon and Crabbe is forced to free him by sending a herd of cattle stampeding through the main street, to demolish the town's lockup. Because Hatton, in jail has promised to aid young Johnny Downs in eloping with Marsha Hunt's sister, they ride to the ranch of Miss Hunt and get jobs.

There they uncover a plot to steal the girl's herd of fine horses. In the plot that follows they outwit and outshoot the band of rustlers, bring a happy ending of the romances of Crabbe and Miss Hunt and Downs and her sister, Jane Rhodes, meanwhile rounding up the "raiders."

BETTE DAVIS AND WILLIAM AGAIN IN SAME PICTURE

During the three years intervening, thousands of fans have written the Warner Bros., demanding that Miss Davis and William be co-starred again, but not until "Satan Met a Lady" was a suitable vehicle found for the pair.

The picture is a combination of melodramatic thrills, romance and

"The Texas Rangers" dramatizes the work of the early band of semi-military State police in putting down hostile Indians, ridding the country of bad men and cattle thieves, and "making Texas a reasonably safe place in which to live," in accordance with their oath. Two tribes of Indians were enlisted to stage the historic battle which brought the final subduing of fierce Southwestern redskins.

Both MacMurray and the wise-cracking Oakie are members of the Rangers in the picture. Miss Parker as the daughter of the commander of their station, is center of the romantic story which is featured against the epic background.

GRAHAM P. C. A. NOW READY FOR LOANS

Such advances as may be needed can be made available very promptly and without delay. The rate of interest charged is quite reasonable, being at present only five percent per annum.

Applications may be made to either the main office of the Association at Graham or to the local representative for Person County, Miss Edna Wilkerson, whose office is located in the courthouse, Roxboro, N. C.
