RED SQUILL IS BEST RAT POISON

Red Squill is considered by far the best rat poison known, but its success depends upon how and where it is distributed.

Two of its main advantages are that it is relatively harmless to domestic animals and that it is comparatively slow to take effect on rats, said George B. Lay, rodent control leader of the U. S. Biological Survey, with headquarters at N. C. State College.

When a fast-acting bait kills the first rats that nibble it, he explained, the other rats are frightened away and are, therefore, not likely to be poisoned.

Although Red Squill will not kill domestic animals, it may make them sick, and for this reason it should be placed where they cannot get at it very easily, Lay pointed out.

On farm premises, the bait should be spread late in the afternoon, after chickens and livestock have more or less settled down. Put out plenty of bait so that all rats will have a chance to eat it freely.

Look for runways, burrows, and other places where rats may be,

Lay continued, and place bait in and around these places. Many small bits of bait, about the size of marbles are better than a few bigger pieces.

Rats run along beams and rafters and in other high places, but they return to the floor or ground to seek feed and water. So the bait should be put out in low places rather than in those higher up.

Red Squill causes a gradual paralysis. When the rats feel the effects coming on, they seek burrows and other out of the way places to die. Few if any dead rats are found in the open, and there are seldom any serious unpleasant odors.

However, if any dead rats are found in the open, Lay continued, they should be buried or otherwise destroyed.
