SUNDAY, JULY 4, 1937

A few years ago the Fourth of July received very little notice in the south. This was not due to the fact the people of this section did not know their history. They knew all about July 4th. and what it stood for, but people in the south just didn't care to observe this day. Neither did they observe Labor Day.

Now July 4th. is a big occasion below the Mason Dixon line. Even in Roxboro the day is observed as a holiday and many events are planned for this day.

Labor Day is also recognized to a certain extent, but not as much so as July 4th.

There will be fire crackers in the north, none in Roxboro. There will be parades in the northern cities, none here. We will observe a safe and sane Fourth but it will be a holiday and that's more than could be said ten years ago.

How about saving a person's life Monday? You would probably be glad to if you could. It may be that you can do that very thing.

The chances are that you will drive a car on that day. The chances are that millions of people will drive cars Monday and if history repeats itself many people will be killed. If you will drive carefully you might save some person's life. If you are driving on Monday take your time and do everything that you can to protect those in your car and those in the cars you meet. It is also wise to remember that its not always your driving but that it's the person you meet. Help protect this man too.

So far the officers of this city have uncovered no evidence concerning the poisoning of a large number of dogs in this city. On Friday more dogs died and one lady saw the dog pick up the poisoned meat in the front yard. The dog died within the hour.

It appears that this poison was scattered in the yards of many people where anyone could have picked it up. Any small child could have met his or her death in that manner and in a very short time.

Officers of the law—we again call upon you to find out about this.

The Times is 9 years old today. Our volume is IX, No. 1. We are having no birthday party, but we certainly do thank the many people who have been so kind to us.

"They Gave Him A Gun" Comes To Dolly Screen

New Picture Stars Spencer Tracy, Gladys George And Franchot Tone

With Spencer Tracy, Gladys George and Franchot Tone in the leading roles, "They Gave Him A Gun" opens Thursday at the Dolly Madison Theatre as one of the more important releases from the Metro-Goldwyn - Mayer studios. Franchot Tone deserts genteel characters to play a "tough guy" character for a kindly adviser of a wayward youth; and Gladys George, following her success in "Valiantly Is The Word For Carrie," plays another valiant role as a war nurse who marries a racketeer she fails to save in "They Gave Him A Gun."

The picture based on the novel by Major William Joyce Cowen and directed by W. S. Van Dyke II, deals with the effects of war on the psychology of youth, tracing the transition of a kindly young clerk who goes through war into a dangerous post-war racketeer.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD
WATER POEMS

An episode in an amateur photographer's picture Odyssey of the travels of water. Exposure 1/22 at 1/25 second.

THE moods of water, tumbling, bubbling, gushing, spouting, dashing, splashing, trickling, rolling, rippling, dripping, glad, angry, smooth, rough, serene, peaceful, make adjectives for poets. For the amateur photographer with any poetry in his soul whatever, they make themes for beautiful pictures and the subject of a delightful picture hobby.

We know of one amateur photographer who used his camera to picture the grand circle water makes in its journey from land to sea to the clouds and back to the land again. This picture epic of water began with a photograph of a tiny woodland spring, then pictures of a rivulet, a brook, a river, a mightier river with its waterfalls and cataracts, the bay through which it flowed into the ocean, the ocean itself, a cloud and sunbeam picture over the ocean, thus picturing water being caught up for its return journey, and finally rain.

This idea far from exhausts the possibilities of poetic water pictures, especially when human interest is added. The majestic sweep of water over Niagara Falls is a poem in itself but a honeymooning pair in the foreground adds romance. A fair swimmer in clear water on which sunshine is shimmering creates a poetic pattern of life and light. A pseudo-moonlight picture over a placid lake of a youth and a maid in a canoe (a shot into the setting sun with a small lens opening) gives a poetic mood to "the waters stilled at even." Foam at the prow of a careening yacht or its churning wake over the stern depletes the poetry of motion.

Verses may be illustrated. "Where the breaking waves dash high on a stern and rockbound coast" is a place for photographs of one of water's most inspiring moods, and then, from the hilltops "there is not in the wide world a valley so sweet, as that vale in whose bosom the bright waters meet."

Endless are your opportunities for making delightful photographs of water scenes. But there's a trick to successful water photography. It's largely a matter of shooting so that the pictured water has the right "feel" or texture.

For example, it's possible to shoot spray too fast, so that it has a hard, brittle look, thereby losing its essential sense of movement. On the other hand, rippling water should be shot fast enough so that the ripples are distinct, each with its own highlights.

Another point is lighting. Choose the angle that gives you the maximum "texture," the characteristic interplay of light and shade. No one can tell you exactly how to go about this; a little experimenting will tell you better than volumes of words. But keep this in mind. Any fair-sized body of water reflects a lot of light. Your exposures, therefore, can be faster or, preferably, your "stop" smaller than for a comparable summer landscape.
