A. B. BUCHANNON RECEIVES HONOR

Article By His Pen Selected For Publication In Yearbook Of Public Opinion

An article by A. B. Buchannon entitled "Reaction To Farm Bill" which recently appeared in the News and Observer has been selected by Peabar Co. of New York for publication in the "Yearbook of Public Opinion." The yearbook is a volume consisting of quotations from letters written by readers of newspapers and magazines in the U. S.

This book will soon be released and quotations from Mr. Buchannon's article will be included.

Mr. Buchannon is an old newspaper man and for the past several years has been working in Nashville, N. C. At the present time he is at his home in this county.

IF HE'S IN HEAVEN, AGENT CAN'T LOCATE

Dean I. O. Schaub, director of the State College Extension Service, was chuckling over a story yesterday which had to do with county agents and acreage allotments.

It seemed that an agent in a nearby county notified the Washington AAA office that one of the farmers in his county who had cooperated under the soil conservation program had died. However, the Federal headquarters paid no attention to the letter and kept writing every few days for information on the way the farmer had planted certain crops. The agent again notified Washington that the man was dead. Still more letters for the dead man came in.

In desperation, the agent finally sat down and wrote:

"Gentlemen:
 "As I have told you several times before, Mr. Jones is dead. Therefore I really don't know how to reach him. He's not in hell; that I am sure, for I have been there myself for the past thirty days. I have abandoned all hope of that other place, so if you have to reach him there, it might be a good idea for you to get in touch with someone else."

Interest Revived In Corn Breeding

Negro Farmers Producing Hybrid Types — Extension Service Has Contest

Raleigh, May 15 — Within the past two or three years, there has been an awakened interest in the production of hybrid corn among negro farmers, according to C. R. Hudson, veteran farm demonstration worker at State College.

Experiments have shown that hybrid corn of good parentage will produce, under favorable conditions, from 10 to 12 percent greater yields than will ordinary inbred strains.

Caution Sounded
 Hudson, who is in charge of negro extension work, is warning colored farmers that such hybrids are recommended for planting for only one year. In other words, the farmers will have to buy or grow new seed every year if they are to secure the best yields.

He is also cautioning farmers against buying mixed corn under the impression that it is hybrid.

Each year the extension service conducts a corn-growing contest among Negro farmers for the purpose of promoting the production of more and better corn. Winners in the contest are awarded a trip to Washington, D. C.

Durham Agent Gets Trip
 Top-ranking contestants during 1937 were announced recently and have just returned from a visit to the nation's capital. They were: J. R. Redding, Negro farm agent of Granville County for making the most outstanding record among colored farm agents in the contest, J. H. Johnson, Halifax County, for making the highest corn yield; and the twin brothers, John and James producing the highest corn yield among Negro 4-H Club members.

The group making the trip was in charge of T. A. Hamme, Durham county Negro farm agent, and J. W. Jeffries, Alamance Negro farm agent.

J. W. Holcomb of the Paint Gap community in Yancey Co. says he has been getting an average of $56 a month from milk produced by his six cows and much of this income he attributes to the use of silage preserved in his trench silo.

Uncle Jim Says

Wheat crop insurance will be offered by the government on the 1939 crop. It aims to protect farmers against unavoidable losses and will help maintain wheat reserves at a safe level.

Differences Noted In Farm Programs

State College Man Points To Compulsory Features Of Current Act

Raleigh, N. C. — Many farmers have been asking what is the difference between the 1937 and the 1938 AAA farm program, said E. Y. Floyd, of State College.

Last year, he said by the way of explanation, growers were offered a voluntary agricultural conservation program designed to encourage good farming practices that would help them improve their farms.

This program offered payments for restricting the acreage of cash crops and for carrying out soil-building practices such as growing legumes, terracing, applying lime and superphosphate.

Few Changes
 The 1937 agricultural conservation program was carried over into 1938 with only a few minor changes.

In addition, a compulsory crop control program was provided by congress for cotton and tobacco in 1938. Under the compulsory program, each grower is given a marketing quota.

Growers are asked to produce and sell all the cotton and tobacco allotted them in their quotas. But if they exceed their quotas, penalties will be imposed.

Cotton and tobacco growers voted for compulsory crop control to keep production from going so far ahead of consumption that it would demoralize the market and depress prices.

It was feared that the voluntary agricultural conservation program by itself was not strong enough to place an effective restriction on cotton and tobacco this year.

"Quiet! ... Camera! ... Action!"
 .. then the pause that refreshes
 in making "Big City"

Blazing lights... hours of rehearsal... tense moments of acting, all go into a scene like this from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picture "Big City", starring Luise Rainer and Spencer Tracy. And then comes "O.K.—Cut!"... the signal for the pause that refreshes.

In Hollywood, it's never far from the big cameras to the familiar red cooler. After a long session on the set, Spencer Tracy and others welcome the pause that refreshes with ice-cold Coca-Cola. Make it a part of your busy day. You'll be glad you did.
