Believes Government Has Over-Estimated Poundage And Farmers Stand To Gain By Holding.

"I wish to urge the tobacco growers of this section not to be in any hurry to sell their tobacco crop on early markets," Claude T. Hall, prominent Person County farmer and chairman of the North Carolina Tobacco Growers Advisory committee, said yester-

Due to the advanced condition of this year's crops, it is feared that many farmers in this section will be tempted to sell part of their tobacco on early markets in order to convert the crop into cash immediately.

Hall, along with a large number of other tobacco experts, believes that weed prices will advance considerably about the time the local belt opens because of an over-estimation of poundage by the government. Therefore, he believes, farmers stand to gain by holding their tobacco for the market here.

Hall, in addition to heading committee, who yesterday advis- is also chairman of the Person

His complete statement to Person County farmers follows: "I wish to urge the tobacco growers of this section not to be in any hurry to sell their tobacco crop on early markets. I believe that the government has overestimated the number of pounds that will be produced and that this mistake will be discovered in a very few weeks. Generally speaking, the crop does not have as much weight as in recent years and statistics from other markets are bound to prove this fact in a short time. That being prices will advance about the time this belt opens and Person farmers stand to gain considerably by waiting."
