It is indeed heartening to know that The Times is so well accepted in the many homes throughout this territory and especially ready response from the hundreds of our old subscribers who have so readily and promptly renewed their subscription and settled any back accounts that were due.

It is gratifying to know that we have such a sterling class of people on our mailing lists. There are still a few who have not as yet settled up their subscription, but we feel sure that before the present subscription campaign comes to a close all renewals will be in.

We are proud of the fine organization of workers in the campaign. They are doing a splendid job and the special prizes offered this week and next for the collection of new and renewal subscriptions will no doubt spur them on to greater efforts in getting every good subscriber on the Times lists renewed and in good standing, and that their efforts will be met accordingly with the same hearty response from those few who are still in arrears with their Times subscription.
