Collegiate Gastronomes Challenge Professional

Though Donald Mulcahy, left, of Brockton, Mass., junior at Boston college, swallowed 29 live goldfish to set a temporary record, and John Patrick, right, University of Chicago student, consumed three phonograph records, they are still rank amateurs. Hadja Ali, center, can swallow a walnut, a frog, a bullet and a fish, and without regard to the order in which they go down, returns them to the surface in any sequence he desires. Los Angeles medical men proved by X-rays that he was not faking, but that he could control his abdominal muscles.

Elon Dean Has Book Published

Elon College — Announcement has been recently made by Fleming H. Revell Company, publishers, of the publication of a book, "Personality and Character Development", by J. D. Messick, Ph. D. Dr. Messick is dean of administration of Elon College and head of the education department.

The book is designed for parent-teacher study courses, for guides in public school or community work, or for text in personality and character education. The book sets forth the principles and plans whereby the home, the school and all community agencies may be directed in a workable program of character education.

Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon College, points out that Dr. Messick tells of heredity's contribution to life and the part that environment plays in the development of personality and that he presents the necessity of wholesome instruction on the part of both the parent and teacher. Prof. John W. Barney, of the Elon college English department, says the teachers will find evidences of one speaking from experience in the book.

Dr. Messick was graduated from Elon college in 1922 and became dean of the college in 1935. Before that time he was principal of the Spencer high school. He has done considerable graduate work and is recognized for his work along educational lines on which his book is written.

Bethel Hill's Senior Play Tomorrow Week

The Senior class of Bethel Hill high school will present "Lena Rivers" in the school auditorium on Friday, April 28.

For years "Lena Rivers" has headed the list of best sellers. In every civilized country in the world Mary J. Holmes' celebrated novel has been read and enjoyed until it has reached the status of being included with the first classics of literature.

As a professional play it toured America and Canada, and has been produced in London and various other parts of Europe. As a play it ranks in popularity with "Way Down East," "The Old Homestead," "Under Southern Skies," and has been filmed several times. In fact, just a short time ago Charlotte Henry was starred in the talking picture version of this masterpiece.

DEMOCRATS WEIGH CANDIDATES

Washington, D. C.—Elliott Roosevelt's frank support of Vice-President Garner as Democratic Presidential nominee in 1940 turns the spotlight on the party's probably candidates. It is no secret that Vice-President Garner is no supporter of the New Deal. Therefore, even if Elliott Roosevelt had exact information that his father would refuse a third term, his support of "cactus Jack" runs counter to all New Deal Plans. Postmaster General Farley, lukewarm New Dealer, looms large as a possible candidate; also Secretary of State Hull, with Harry Hopkins, Secretary of Commerce and hand-picked choice of the White House, running fourth. Hopkins is the only dyed-in-the-wool New Dealer with a chance at the moment, yet even his passionate service to the President has failed to win the support of the kitchen-cabinet headed by Cohen and Corcoran, who are expected at the eleventh hour to produce their own candidate who will "out-liberal all other liberals". A facetious Senator suggests that their dark horse may be Madame Perkins.
