

CZECHS FEAR NAZIS WILL TIGHTEN GRIP

Hear Bohemia - Moravia Protectorate May Yield To Closer Union.

Prague — Reports have been current that reorganization of Germany's Bohemia-Moravia protectorate might result from incidents in which a Czech and a German policeman were killed. Some well-informed Czech quarters feared the protectorate might be abolished and some closer union with Germany established.

At any rate, Czechs were expecting an extension of German control in consequence of the fatal shooting of German Police Sergeant Wilhelm Kneist at Kaidno last week.

Baron Konstantin von Neurath, the reich protector for the area of dissolved Czechoslovakia, had threatened new "restrictive measures" unless Kneist's slaying were solved yesterday but they were withheld, at least temporarily.

Meanwhile, a separate incident was disclosed in which Czech Policeman Johann Mueller was slain in a quarrel with German police at Nechod, near the former frontier between Germany and Czechoslovakia.

The purpose of tighter German control, according to persistent reports in Prague, would be mainly to strengthen police regulations to prevent clashes between dissatisfied elements of the Czech population and German officials and residents.

Another purpose was described as an effort to reconcile the Czechs to the new order and persuade them to enter into more intimate cultural and political relations with Germany.

Germany's problem, German circles said, was to choose between methods—complete domination by force or an appeasement policy to break down "the passive resistance" which has

Law and Engineering Required by Modern Trucking

Truck driver must be a lawyer and an engineer. (Above) An array of license plates. (Left) Can you name those controls?

The business of highway transportation is becoming one of the most complicated in the world. Thousands of communities throughout the country are entirely dependent on truck transportation for their existence so that the business of intercity truck hauling has become one of the greatest in the country. Its scope may be realized from the fact that there are over three million truck drivers alone in the United States exclusive of those driving farm trucks. These men earn and spend over four billion dollars annually.

However, a tremendous array of laws and restrictions make the going anything but smooth for the truck operator. For example, the weight permitted by the different states varies all the way from 7,000 pounds payload in Texas to 120,000 pounds gross in Rhode Island. The truck illustrated above, pulling its husky Fruehauf trailer cost $3,122 in taxes and license fees covering five monthly round trips between Cincinnati, Ohio and Tampa, Florida during the year 1937. The inside of the driver's cab is lined with certificates.

Even the truck driver himself must be quite an engineer. He not only has to know the state laws, highway rules and regulations but his safety instruments as well. Anyone who thinks that any "dumbbell" can drive a truck may change his ideas when he scans the instrument panel illustrated above. There are twenty-nine controls in sight and three others which cannot be seen.

made the protectorate a troublesome region to govern.

The course of Nazi policy seemed to be, at least momentarily, toward appeasement.

Von Neurath's decision not to impose additional penalties on industrial Kaidno was regarded as a conciliatory move. The town had been placed under virtual martial law

Thursday soon after the shooting. Many civic authorities were replaced by Germans and its Czech populace was fined 500,000 crowns ($20,000).

Search for the slayer or slayers of Kneist still continued but citizens of the town, held responsible for the policeman's death by having created "an atmosphere conducive to crime," were told that as long as order was preserved there would be no further penalties.

Also, Czech authorities were permitted to work with Germans in investigating the killing at Nachod Saturday night.

Von Neurath ordered a thorough inquiry, intimating that German policemen who, according to Czech charges, shot Mueller would be dealt with sternly if circumstances proved them guilty of unwarranted assault.

Czechs said Mueller and two other Czech officers were approached by a number of German policemen, apparently intoxicated. When the Czechs, unwilling to fight, locked themselves in a police station, these sources said, the Germans followed and began shooting.

A German communique said the shooting resulted from an "unfortunate chain of regrettable incidents" but gave no further details.
