Introduction . . . . .

Once again we are pleased to present the annual "Tobacco Edition" of the Times and in its numerous pages we hope our readers will find anew an expression of our confidence in Person County and Roxboro as a worthwhile community in which to buy and sell the most marketable commodity produced hereabouts. As has been truly repeated by many of the advertisers in this special edition, a community worth living in is well worth buying in and none of us who call Person "home" can well afford to ignore the logic that money spent at home has a multiple valuation reacting in favor of all citizens within the bounds of that home area.

Stalwart Americans . . . . .

Within the week the nation has suffered the loss of two distinguished citizens. Speaker William B. Bankhead, honored son of Alabama and member of a family long known for cultural and civic leadership in that state and in Washington, found expression of his talents within the Democratic party now dominant in political circles, but only narrow-minded citizens would deny that the death of Glenn Frank, one-time president of the University of Wisconsin and more recently active in the Republican party, is an equally grievous loss to an America now standing in sore need of intelligent political guidance.

Sober citizens, brought up on ideals of Americanism as exemplified by such heroes as Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, Lee and Wilson may feel that in this day of grace few living Americans can be said to measure up to school-book standards of what citizenship at its best is supposed to be. It is, however, our humble opinion that passage of time will demonstrate that Bankhead and Frank in their widely differing fields of influence will come to be respected not as the greatest Americans of their day but as two of the most honest and, therefore, honorable.

It is not amiss to point out that Speaker Bankhead's environment, as well as Dr. Frank's, was more deeply cultural and more closely joined to the artistic side of life than is usually the case with American public servants. In this respect the late Speaker of the House and the former educational leader were more in line with British than American traditions, although no disrespect to the latter can be implied by comparisons.

Responsibility . . . . .

It has come to our attention that not more than 25 of 130 teachers in white schools in Person have taken advantage of free clinics sponsored by the County Health department for tuberculosis examinations. Although there is locally no mandatory ruling requiring such examinations, and although it is fortunate that no tubercular infections have been reported among those teachers submitting to fluoroscopy, we regret that so small a percentage of teachers responded to invitation to attend the clinic.

Pure self-interest should prompt acceptance of such an opportunity, while the fact that children with whom teachers come in daily contact are most prone to be susceptible to tubercular infections should be sufficient reason for acceptance where self-interest may be dormant. Tuberculosis is not to be trifled with at any time, least of all in childhood, and we are most anxious that all reasonable means to stamp it out be taken, especially by persons in positions of authority. We congratulate Person county for offering free clinics where other counties frequently do not and it would seem to us that those teachers and others who have an opportunity to take free examinations should do so, unless they have very recently had them elsewhere.

A Commendable Venture . . . . .

Elsewhere in this edition of the Times appears an announcement that members of the Roxboro high school journalism club will sponsor a "Roxboro Rambler" section once each week in the two newspapers published here. We wish to say here, as we have already said to faculty sponsors of the club, that we shall be glad to cooperate with the club in its endeavor to release school news and we feel that this cooperation may ultimately result in independent publication of the sheet now compelled to seek the light of day in a more restricted form. We know of nothing more productive of thought among young people than an initiation into the arts of newspaper work and we trust that their elders will give them full appreciation for efforts expended.

After One Year . . . . .

Exactly one year ago today we began our connection with the Person County Times and entered upon a relationship productive thus far of most pleasant cooperation. We would, we think, be ungrateful if we did not publicly thank all of those citizens of Person county and Roxboro who have put up with us during the period of our adaptation to the manners and customs of a county and a town fortunately more individualistic than most. We most sincerely hope that whatever may have appeared as reportorial eccentricity will be pardoned as such and we shall be more than satisfied if we can continue to manifest our genuine appreciation for the Person tradition, although said appreciation may at times appear to be against the grain.

We feel at home here and no greater compliment than this can be paid to those citizens who have welcomed us.
