

Promotions Made In Compensation Staff Circles

Raleigh, Oct. 31.—Several shifts and promotions have been made in the personnel of the State Unemployment Compensation Commission, due in part to failures of workers in the merit examinations and in part to reorganizations of divisions, Chairman Charles G. Powell announces.

Two additions of assistant training supervisors, one from the Employment Service division, the other from the Unemployment Compensation division, have been made to the staff of P. B. Pollock, training and personnel supervisor in the Central Office. Ernest C. McCracken, native of Waynesville and Lenoir Employment office manager, is one and the other is Hugh M. Raper, native of Davidson county and school principal in Rutherford and Buncombe counties before coming to Raleigh as supervisor of the ledger section of the claims department in the Unemployment Compensation division about three years ago.

Other changes made this week, largely effective November 1, by divisions, follow:

Employment Service

F. Stanton Hardee, native of Stem, now manager of the Morganton office, succeeds Mr. McCracken as manager of the Lenoir office.

H. G. Parker, now senior interviewer in the Morganton office, is to be manager succeeding Mr. Hardee.

Miss Mary Moore, interviewing clerk, promoted to junior interviewer in the Morganton office.

Davis M. Nichols, junior interviewer of the Rutherfordton office, promoted and transferred to senior interviewer in the Lenoir office.

Mrs. Grace McCord Hartzog, appointed as interviewing clerk in the Raleigh office, succeeding Miss Margaret Summers.

Mrs. Gertrude D. Dawson, appointed as temporary typist clerk in the Mount Airy office.

William H. Creech, junior claims examiner in the Central office, returns to his home as senior interviewer in the Goldsboro office.

Unemployment Compensation

L. T. Pearce, native of Johnston county and former attorney at Black Mountain, claims examiner in the Central Office nearly three years, promoted to claims deputy in the Greensboro area, succeeding John W. Hester.

John B. Bennett, native of Burnsville, senior claims examiner in the Central Office for nearly three years, promoted to field representative in the Asheville area, succeeding C. A. Taylor.

G. W. Allen, senior interviewer in the New Bern office, promoted to field representative in the Greenville-New Bern area, succeeding W. E. Hooks.

Wayne Woodard, native of Swain county, senior interviewer in the Asheville office, promoted to field representative for the Statesville area, succeeding R. Grady Barbee.

V. C. Blackwelder, native of Rowan county, senior interviewer in the Greensboro office, promoted to field representative in the Greensboro area, succeeding L. L. Umstead.

Decommissioned Subs Go Back to Duty

These submarines, shown tied up at Charlestown, Mass., said their farewell to arms after the World War armistice in 1918. Now they are getting ready to stage a comeback. These eight, and many others, will be recommissioned and returned to duty with the planned Atlantic fleet. The navy expects to have 36 of these submarines ready for duty by January 1. In addition, it has 104 first-line submarines, and 81 more which are now in the process of building.

BEER INDUSTRY'S CAMPAIGN DURING YEAR SUCCESS

Good Response To Clean-Up Drive, Which Will Be Continued, Attributed To Law Enforcement Co-operation.

Raleigh, Oct. 31.—The success of the beer industry's "clean up or close up" campaign in North Carolina is due largely to the co-operation of the law enforcement agencies, the director in charge of the campaign said today.

Edgar H. Bain of Goldsboro, state director of the Brewers and North Carolina Beer Distributors committee, praised the city and county officials for their aid in the statewide drive to rid communities of objectionable beer outlets.

"Since the self-regulation program was launched in North Carolina last year, we have eliminated 132 objectionable dealers," said Colonel Bain. "Of this number, 107 lost their licenses by revocation. We succeeded in blocking the renewal of 23 licenses, and two surrendered their licenses after we had instituted revocation proceedings."

"City and county officials, state and local law enforcement officials have cooperated in this campaign, and its success is largely due to their willingness to aid us."

Bain reported on the success of the campaign at the annual meeting of the United Brewers Industrial Foundation in St. Louis last week. The Foundation sponsors the self-regulation program in North Carolina and 13 other states.

Continuation of the beer industry's "clean up or close up" campaign in North Carolina for another 12-month period has been authorized by the United Brewers Industrial Foundation, the sponsoring organization.

The foundation, sponsor of similar programs in 13 other states, was told of the progress of the active campaign of Director Bain's committee to protect for citizens of North Carolina the social, temperate and economic benefits of the state's $10,500,000 legal beer industry.

The report cited that 132 objectionable beer dealers in North Carolina had been forced out of the retail beer business as a result of the "clean up or close up" campaign.

The purpose of the Foundation is to bring a greater public knowledge of the social and economic aspects of beer and brewing and a correct interpretation of the industry's activities.

The Foundation's research shows that beer contributes more than a million dollars a day in public revenues—has contributed two and a half billion dollars in seven and a half years since legalization; has distributed general business benefits totaling more than twelve billion dollars through the retail sale of beer in all 48 states; and now gives employment to more than a million persons in all branches of the brewing and allied industries. A visual dramatization of this record is shown this week in the exhibit on view at the triennial exposition of brewing materials and machinery at the Municipal Auditorium, held under the auspices of the Master Brewers' Association of America.

Auto And Wagon Collisions Source Of Many Inquiries

A spurt this fall in deaths and injuries arising from collisions between motor vehicles and animal-drawn vehicles on North Carolina streets and highways has prompted Ronald Hocutt, director of the Highway Safety Division, to set forth some safety suggestions for drivers of wagons and carts.

Hocutt said 13 persons were killed and 76 injured in the state last year in collisions between motor vehicles and animal-drawn wagons and carts, and that several such accidents have occurred in the past few weeks.

"The farmer riding along the highway in his wagon or cart doesn't stand much chance when an automobile or truck hits him," said Hocutt. "In many cases he is killed outright, and in practically every such accident the person or persons riding in the horse cart suffer injuries of some description. About the least he can expect is that his wagon or cart be badly smashed up and his horse or mule killed or crippled. "For these reasons, persons who drive a horse-drawn vehicle on the highways of North Carolina should take every step possible to protect themselves from the results of a collision with a motor vehicle."

Some safety suggestions Hocutt listed for drivers of wagons and carts are:

Don't drive on paved highways except when absolutely necessary, and then stay far over to the right, on the shoulder when possible. Carry a fairly bright light when on the road between dusk and dawn, as required by State law. If you have to turn into a road or lane to your left, look both ways and be sure you have plenty of time to get across safely before you start to run. Don't drive out of a side road, path or lane into a highway without first looking to see that the way is clear. When a car approaches from either direction, give it all the room you can.

"It's better to yield some of your rights and give the motorist or truck driver more of the road than you think he is entitled to than it is to stick doggedly to your course and get yourself involved in a serious if not fatal accident," Director Hocutt declared.
