On Educational Problems At PTA

On Tuesday night the Roxboro High School Glee Club presented several selections at the P. T. A. monthly meeting, held in the High School auditorium. The numbers presented were: "Water Boy", a negro convict song, "I Heard a Song" by Grahmas and "Old King Cole", an old English

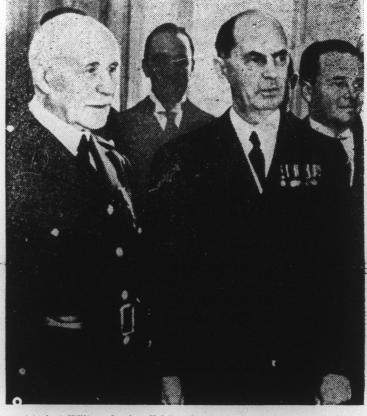

After these selections one of the most interesting talks of the year was given by C. E. Mc Intosh, of Chapel Hill, who spoke in the "Need for a Democratic curriculum on North Carolina". Mr. Mc Intosh pointed out that the beginning class of children who started to school in North Carolina in 1927-28 totaled about 123,000 in the first three grades but only 22,000 graduated in 1938. In other words appromitily 80 percent of the children who started to school in 1927 did not graduate. The question raised in the minds of thinking teachers, parents and students is, Why do these students drop out? Are our schools too standardized to meet the needs of such a large number of students? What should we do

Along The With the Editor

Once again we go along the way and try to pick up a bit of news and fun. We hope that we find enough for a line or

Bill Harris III is going to move into a house of his own this week. He is taking the house left vacant by the Fowlers when they leave town. This writer hereby states that Bill will not find this any more expensive than living in a house with others. Groceres are not high, rent is reasonable and electricity and other items cost little or nothing. He should now start saying about a hundred dollars a month.

They say that James Long, Jr. is about as proud of his new son as a man can be. He gave away two boxes of cigars the day of the arrival and has had to let out his vest about two inches. Someone said that he was pricing bicycles.

Garrett Stanfield of Greenville, is in town. Now this doesn't make news because he comes any time, but Garrett, strange as it may seem, appears to be getting on quite well. Curtis Oakley said that he was really surprised at the way the young boy was doing. The sad thing is that he has a law draft order.

C. C. Garrett has a new suit of clothes. He gets one every year or so, but this last one-we have been told-is loud enough to talk with him. Now "C. C." is not an old man, neither is he so young, and a few of the boys have said that he should give this suit to his young son. This writer wagers that he will wear the suit and have it reseated when it gets a little run down. The man just refuses to be outdone by the
