

Lens Illusions Enhance Comedy

By no means a one-man film but a film only one man could make is presented in Universal's hilarious feature, "The Invisible Woman," now playing at the Dolly Madison Theatre.

Only John Fulton, the young technical expert who created "The Invisible Man" in 1933, could furnish the astounding photographic effects which make the new picture one of the most unusual comedies in screen history.

Starring Virginia Bruce, John Barrymore, John Howard, Charlie Ruggles and Oscar Homolka, the production presents as its central figure a beautiful dress model who is made invisible and who uses the power of her invisibility to cut capers which are said to rank among the most laugh-provoking cinema antics of all time.

Edward Brophy, Donald MacBride and Margaret Hamilton have prominent supporting roles and other performers include Shemp Howard and Thurston Hall. A. Edward Sutherland directed and Burt Kelly was associate producer.

International Grand Champion To Be In Durham March 4th.

A celebrity of the live stock world comes to Durham at 2:00 p.m. Tuesday, March 4 when Sargo, 1940 International Grand Champion Steer is to be exhibited at Alexander Tire Division, Main and Gregson Sts. This newly-crowned king of beef animals will make a special stop here on his nationwide tour visiting 4-H Club members, Future Farmers of America, agricultural colleges and farmers interested in live stock, under the sponsorship of the Firestone Farm Service Bureau.

The tour is made for the benefit of the hundreds of thousands who were unable to attend the International Live Stock Exposition in Chicago, and the special showing here is planned to have the greatest educational value possible. An interesting talk on the development of Grand Championship form in beef cattle will be given by Rank C. Forbes, who is a veteran cattle judge, breeder and feeder. He will also discuss profitable methods of beef production and will describe the points sought out by judges in picking a winner.

Sargo is traveling in style in his own private truck, accompanied by a crew of three who cater to his whims day and night. To keep him as nearly as possible in the condition and conformation which won him International honors, his diet is controlled to the ounce and his exercise, which consists mostly of roadwork, is laid out as carefully as for a champion boxer. In this way rigors of hundreds of showings and the variations in drinking water are effectively counteracted.

Sargo's feeder and handler in the International show ring was 18-year-old Evelyn Asay, a college freshman of Mt. Carroll, Illinois. Taking care of Sargo was her 4-H Club project for the summer, and she showed him several minor championships before she took him to Chicago and entered him in class after class. He defeated over a thousand other steers, many of which had been pampered, fed and shown by veterans.

Tears came to Miss Asay's eyes when Judge J. Charles Yule gave her the final ribbon. They came again when she sold Sargo to the Firestone Farm Service Bureau, but she added a request, "Will you tour him like you did Mercer?" The Grand Champion was given to the Champion Farmers' Association of America, and they are cooperating in the nationwide educational tour.

Workstock Clinics, Proving Valuable

Agricultural authorities estimate that 95 percent of the 71,000 horses and 305,000 mules on North Carolina farms are infested with internal parasites of various kinds, says C. D. Swaffar, N. C. State College professor of animal husbandry.

Greatest amount of damage and the most widespread is being done by the large and small round worms. Bots are also extracting heavy tolls in the Piedmont and mountain areas, although they do little or no damage in Eastern Carolina.

A farmer can usually tell his workstock is troubled with worms by the following symptoms: Loss of body weight, loss of appetite and digestive troubles, especially colic and weakness and lack of ability to withstand hard work.

In order to combat this problem, horse and mule clinics were held recently in many counties, State College Extension Service specialists as well as county agents, veterinarians, and other agricultural workers cooperated in the movement. Since December, more than 1,000 horses and mules have been treated.

Not only have the animals been treated for worms, but dental work, such as floating the teeth, extractions, and cutting extremely long teeth, has been done. Management of the horses and mules in putting control measures into effect has also been discussed at the clinics.

For the treatment of internal parasites, Swaffar said, both phenothiazine and carbon tetrachloride have been used successfully. In some cases, carbon bisulfide is used, particularly in the treatment for bots. Phenothiazine, because of its less toxic effect, is rapidly gaining favor among veterinarians.

Railroad Reports Big Industrial Year In 1940
Roanoke, Va., Feb. 25—Nineteen-forty was the biggest year of industrial development in the territory served by the Norfolk and Western Railway in any twelve month period during the past decade, T. Gilbert Wood, N. & W. industrial and agricultural manager, said in his annual report, released today.
Last year saw the establishment of 236 new plants and additions, with a total capital investment of $229,808,357 and employing 48,177 persons. The 1940 report shows an increase of 37 plants over 1939, increased capitalization of more than $210,000,000 and 41,000 more workers. The latter figure does not include employees engaged in construction of national defense projects.
Commenting on the prospects for this year, Mr. Wood said, "We are anticipating, during 1941, a continued increase in enlargements of many existing plants and the establishment of a creditable number of new industries in the territory served by the Norfolk and Western."
Pointing to the steady industrial development along the railroad, the report gives the number of industries established during the past ten years as follows: 1931 - 145 plants; 1932 - 180; 1933 - 152; 1934 - 168; 1935 - 195; 1936 - 204; 1938 - 158; 1939 - 199; 1940 - 236, or a total of 1,833 industries and additions. These industries employed 131,574 persons and had a capitalization of $385,257,679.
