

Roxboro Unit Of Business-Professional Club Formed

Temporary Officers Of Club For Women Named. Miss Campbell Makes Vivid Talk.

Organization of a Roxboro unit of the Business and Professional Woman's club, with Miss Nancy Bullock and Miss Helen Latta, of this city, as temporary chairman and secretary, respectively, was effected at the close of a dinner meeting of fifth district clubs held here Tuesday night, with Miss Thomasine Campbell, of New York, field representative, as guest speaker.

Actively supporting organization of the Roxboro club unit is Miss Velma Beam, former Greensboro member, who is now Person County Home Demonstration agent and who is district chairman of the club's educational committee. Present last night were as many as thirty women from Burlington, Henderson, Durham, and this city.

Having as her theme the club's program for the year, "Making Democracy Work," Miss Campbell, introduced by Mrs. Ruby Day Barfield of Durham, State President, illustrated the importance of making "Democracy Work" by citing instances of the decline of the democratic spirit which she witnessed in the past two or three years, particularly in Austria, Italy and France. In the speaker's opinion democratic citizens of these countries failed in their attempts to keep democracy alive because they were not zealous and watchful, because they refused to see a head of time evils implicit in the Nazi-Fascist spirit.

"America," said Miss Campbell, "is the last great country in which women may enter business and professional life. In many European nations women have been relegated to the kitchen and the church, and American women owe it to themselves to be informed about world affairs, and home affairs, particularly in government."

Man Finds Rings Owner Finds Man In Mayor's Court

In the crowded up-stairs City Hall room used for Mayor's court was the usual morning lineup, whites and Negroes, who had been fighting, carousing, driving recklessly and were gathered now to hear judgment passed; among them was a Negro, Lloyd Richardson, charged with being drunk, very drunk, maybe, but when his turn came, His Honor, Mayor S. G. Winstead, let him off with the costs—amounting to six dollars and twenty-five cents.

Only trouble with Lloyd was that he didn't have $6.25.

In the court room was Reade Satterfield, jewelry salesman. Suddenly, Mr. Satterfield turned, looked at Lloyd. Mr. Satterfield had lost some diamond rings, valued at $100 or more and he was interested in what the Negro was saying about rings.

"Let me see them," said the salesman, whereupon Lloyd fished them out of a dirty vest pocket. There they were, the same rings. Lloyd said with honesty, that he had "found them" and that Mr. Satterfield could have his sparklers.

His Honor sat by, taking in the scene; finally he suggested that Lloyd might need a little help, more tangible than thanks. The owner of the rings taking the hint, paid Lloyd's court costs; now two men are happy.
