

HOSPITALITY

WEDNESDAY

First really big day of the week was on Wednesday, when a morning "Pet Pet Parade," followed by an afternoon golf tournament, lead up to the genuinely hospitable Rotary Club picnic in Roxboro High School grove at 6:30 o'clock (where numbered tables were placed for various family groups.

A leading figure at the Rotary picnic was club president, Gordon C. Hunter. On Thursday Mr. Hunter, together with other members of the local voiture of the Forty and Eight, will be on the scene as sponsors of a turtle racing and frog jumping contest to be given during intermission between two softball games to be played on Roxboro High School Athletic Field at 8 o'clock.

First of these two games will be between East Roxboro and Ca-Vel. Second contest will be between the Longhurst team and Roxboro Firemen and each game promises to be full of excitement, while plenty of fun will come from the frog and turtle interlude, sponsors of which say that it will have the Kingston tradition beat a mile, with a fullblooded frog representative, Zenobia III, from that city.

Also planned for Thursday, was a late afternoon party for children, with Mrs. Georges W. Wirtz as official hostess, again at High School grove. The children's party came at 5 o'clock, and from 7:15 until 7:45 o'clock was held an Eastern-sponsored vesper service on the Court House lawn, with Rev. H. B. Anderson of Grace Baptist church, Durham as speaker.

Leading event on Friday will be the Kiwanis dance at Roxboro High School Gymnasium and Saturday will be devoted to a full program planned by Lester Blackwell Post of the American Legion.

TUESDAY

Undeterred by dampness of the early morning air, between 75 and 100 Person County and Roxboro representatives of the younger social set, including many "Hospitality Week" guests, gathered Tuesday morning at Loch Lily near Roxboro Country Club, for a "Sunrise" breakfast, directed by Mrs. Logan H. Umstead of this city.

Also present at this opening event of the third day of a week of festivity were W. Wallace Woods director of "Hospitality Week," Dr. A. F. Nichols, Henry O'Briant and others, some of whom acted as chaperones, chief cooks and bottle-washers.

Concluded about noon was a

"blind bogie" golf tournament for the young people and finishing off a day of entertainment was a bridge tournament sponsored by the Roxboro Business and Professional Woman's Club with Mrs. Thomas Featherston as ommittee chairman.

MONDAY

Mr. Woods estimated that between 15 and 20 miniature floats were entered in the Monday parade which drew a large crowd for the first week-day event of the season. Particularly attractive were floats depicting a hospital scene, a bride and groom and a very small "Uncle Sam." Prize winners for this parade were announced Wednesday at the picnic.

Later in the afternoon an elaborate welcoming tea, with Mrs. J. H. Hughes in charge, was held at Hotel Roxboro, where residents of the city and county gathered with their guests and enjoyed punch and wafers. Assisting the official hostess, Mrs. Hughes, and her committee, were Mr. and Mrs. Karl Burger, operators of the hotel.

At the front door were Mr. and Mrs. W. Wallace Woods, and in the receiving line were Mesdames W. F. West, A. F. Nichols, Thomas Featherstone, R. H. Shelton, Claude T. Hall, J. Y. Humphries, Mollie Strum Barrett, T. T. Mitchell, Thomas Brooks and Logan H. Umstead and Miss Bessie Wilson. At the hall door were Miss Billy Street and Mrs. Robert Hester. Mrs. Roy Cribb and Mrs. Edgar Masten presided at the dining room door, and hostess in the dining room was Miss Claire Harris. Presiding at the punch table were Mrs. B. G.

Clayton and Mrs. Wallace Harris. After the tea, which has been given each year since the inception of Hospitality Week and which this year was regraded as unusually successful, residents devoted Monday night to private parties.

SUNDAY

Following attendance Sunday at various churches and at private family reunions, visitors here for the third annual "hospitality week," which officially opened Sunday morning, Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock viewed a welcoming parade of miniature floats sponsored by city and county merchants and in the afternoon attended a tea at Hotel Roxboro.

Heard in city churches Sunday were two visiting ministers. At Edgar Long Memorial Methodist the speaker was the Rev. J. H. Lanning of Hamlet, a former pastor, and at Roxboro First Baptist the speaker was Dr. Everett Gilj of Wake Forest, formerly a Baptist representative in Europe. Special services also were held at the Prsbyterian Church, at St. Mark's Episcopal and at Brooksdale Methodist.

In charge of the evening service at the First Baptist Church were returned college students who gave inspirational messages stressing the fellowship idea which was the theme of the day.

RAINS COAL

St. Charles, Va., June 25—The "cats and dogs" and "pitchforks" accompanying cloudbursts can usually be cleaned up in bull session and gossip periods, but the people of St. Charles had to get shovels to clean up the nuggets of coal which accompanied a cloudburst and flash flood in the mountains around the town.

The waves of water from the hill brought with them tons of coal washed from coal dumps. The fuel was deposited in streets, on highways, bridges, or in vegetable gardens or houses, depending on where the water ran. And for 30 minutes it ran over much of St. Charles and Bonnyblue.
