Golf Is Out

Since the fellows cannot get their cars for pleasure driving, it looks like golf is out for the time being. The golf course here is about five miles from the city and there really is no such thing as walking to it. Some of the fellows have said something about getting a wagon to haul fifteen or twenty out there about once a week, but so far all of this is talk and nothing has been done. The golfers want to play bad enough to do most anything and they may figure out some way to get there about once a week.

In the meantime the members have voted to continue paying their dues just as tho they were getting the full benefit of the course and in that way they will have a nice course to go back to when there is a little more gas on hand.

Work on the course has continued all the winter and a large number of improvements have taken place. Some who have not been out this winter will hardly recognize a few places that have been cleared up or improved in some fashion.

If we can get to the course it will be a happy one and all of the members will be glad that they kept it going.

ceed James F. Byrnes as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, and former Senator Prentiss M. Brown of Michigan to succeed Leon Henderson as Price Administrator.

Both appointments had been expected and early Senate confirmation is anticipated after routine hearings. There may be some Republican opposition to Rutledge, however, since he will be the seventh Democrat on the nine-man bench. GOP chieftains had hoped Mr. Roosevelt would name a Republican to restore the court to some semblance of political balance.

Rutledge, former Dean of Iowa University Law School, now is an Associate Justice of the District of Columbia Circuit Court, and is the first Supreme Court candidate the President has drawn from the federal judiciary. He is the eighth Roosevelt appointee. In case of the two Republican jurists, one of them, Harlan F. Stone, was elevated to Chief Justice by the President. Stone's Republican colleague is Justice Owen J. Roberts.

The White House had let it be known indirectly that both Rutledge and Brown would be chosen. Brown was selected soon after Henderson's pre-Christmas resignation. The Senator was defeated for re-election in November, largely because he had engineered Senate passage of the administration's price control and farm bills.

New Potato Variety Gains In Popularity

The Sequoia variety of Irish potato, developed by N. C. State College horticulturists and made available to the public only about two years ago, is rapidly creating a place for itself in North Carolina farming.

Tested side by side with other of the older varieties commonly grown in this State, the Sequoia has consistently outyielded its competitors, according to reports of county farm agents.

One of the most outstanding examples of the superiority of the new potato comes from a Piedmont county where 19 farmers tested the Sequoia in competition with the older, widely-grown Irish Cobbler.

Reporting on the procedure carried out, O. F. McCrary, northwestern district agent of the Extension Service, said each of the 19 growers in the demonstration planted 10 pounds of the Sequoia and an equal amount of the Irish Cobbler.

The two varieties were grown on the same type of land, with the same kind and amount of fertilizer, and the same kind of cultivation. Accurate records were kept and turned in by 15 of the demonstrators.

The records showed that the total yield of the Sequoia potatoes was 2,462 pounds and the total yield of the Irish Cobbler only 1,638 pounds. This was an increase in yield of 824 pounds in favor of the new variety, or 50 percent better than the Irish Cobbler.

Because of its excellent yields and its resistance to diseases and insects, the Sequoia will be planted by even larger numbers of North Carolina farmers this year, McCrary said.

State College Answers Timely Farm Questions

QUESTION: How do peanuts compare with soybeans and cottonseed as a producer of vegetable oils needed in the war effort?

ANSWER: Measure for measure, the peanut is the heaviest yielding of the principal oil crops, says Dr. E. R. Collins, Extension agronomy leader of N. C. State College. According to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, the average oil yield of the peanut crop over the past five years has been at the rate of 225 pounds to the acre as compared with 167 pounds for soybeans and 72 pounds for cottonseed. However, cottonseed is ordinarily regarded as a by-product of fiber production.

should be fed to a dairy cow each day?

ANSWER: John A. Arey, Extension dairy specialist of N. C. State College, says that cows will consume about 3 pounds of silage per day for each 100 pounds of live weight. Or to state it another way, a 1000-pound cow will eat about 30 pounds of silage during the day. Silage should be fed liberally during the winter months. Many good feeders mix their grain ration in the manger with the silage.

QUESTION: Are barley, wheat and rye good feeds for workstock?

ANSWER: Oats and corn are the standard rations for horses and mules, according to L. I. Case, Extension animal husbandman of N. C. State College, but he says that barley, wheat and rye can be fed to workstock if the grain is crushed and ground. Wheat and rye should be fed in limited amounts, he said, and they should be mixed with other feeds to prevent digestive disturbances. Cottonseed meal is often used as a protein supplement, but a safe rule is not to feed more than one pound of cottonseed meal per 1,000 pounds liveweight of the horse or mule.

the lights be placed high enough so that people can walk under them easily. The light should be directed downward evenly over the house. Poultry house lighting normally results in each hen producing 4 to 5 more eggs per month during the short days of winter.

QUESTION: How much grain should be fed dairy cows during the winter?

ANSWER: This depends, says John A. Arey, Extension dairyman of N. C. State College, on the quantity and quality of roughage available, and on the percentage of fat in the milk produced. Grain should be looked upon as a supplement to roughage. If the cows receive all the good quality roughage they will consume without waste, a Jersey or Guernsey should get slightly more grain than a Holstein or Ayrshire. For instance, a Guernsey or Jersey producing 20 pounds of milk daily needs about 6 pounds of grain per day, whereas a Holstein or Ayrshire producing 20 pounds of milk daily needs about 4 pounds of grain.

QUESTION: How many pounds of edible meat can be expected from various types of meat animals?

ANSWER: Animal husbandmen of N. C. State College report that a hog dresses out about 75 percent of its live weight. In other words, about 188 pounds of edible meat is obtained from a 250-pound hog. Beef dresses out 53 percent of its live weight, veal 61 percent, lamb 47 percent, and chickens from 65 to 75 percent. Lard from a 250-80 wats of lights. Two 40-watt lamps will do the job. The Extension poultrymen suggest that
