Passing Thru Tripoli

THREE MONTHS OF TOUGH FIGHTING across 1400 miles of unfriendly African desert brought the British to the main Axis base of Tripoli. This picture received in America by radio from Cairo, shows cruiser tanks of the victorious Eighth Army passing through the city of Tripoli while natives look on. The British did not stop in Tripoli long. They are already reported inside Tunisia pursuing the retreating Axis armies.

gency, P. L. Thomas, chairman of the Person War Price and Rationing Board declared today.

Commenting on queries that have come to his office since the ban on non-essential driving went into effect early in January, Mr. Thomas said the best rule in questionable cases is to refrain from using the car if it is at all possible to do so.

The ban necessitated by the gravity of the East Coast supply situation must be continued for at least another six weeks, OPA officials have announced.

"Just remember," the rationing board chairman added, "the ban was necessitated by a critical shortage of petroleum products in the 17 Eastern states and the District of Columbia.

"The citizens of the East Coast were called upon to save gasoline in all possible ways in order to preserve a sufficient supply to keep essential war industries running and to provide our fighting forces in Africa with one of the most essential munitions of modern war. Without such savings of gasoline in this winter period, the shortage of fuel oil will be aggravated, our war production may be slowed down and curtailed and our military offensive may falter."

Mr. Thomas advised every car owner wanting to know if a certain trip is prohibited, or permitted, by the ban regulations to ask whether as an American citizen in time of war he feels that such a trip is essential to him, or to the War effort.

"When you look at it this way, most trips appear to be matters of convenience rather than of necessity," said Mr. Thomas. "People can reach necessary meetings without their cars in a great many cases if they will only sacrifice their normal habits and convenience. Certainly in time of grave national crisis such a sacrifice is not too great."

Mr. Thomas emphasized that while the notable savings achieved through public support of the ban must be continued for

Red Cedar Logs In Good Demand Says Graeber

Extension Forester R. W. Graeber of N. C. State College announces that there is a good demand for red cedar logs at $50.00 per thousand F. O. B. cars at shipping points. Two companies, one in Virginia and one at Greensboro, have written Mr. Graeber asking where they might buy such logs in carload lots. Farmers should see their county agent, who will refer all offers directly to the buyers.

The specifications call for logs cut 8 feet, 4 inches, sawed square. A few shorter logs will be accepted to avoid waste. The diameter should be 5 inches at the small end, with a few 4 inch logs permitted. Logs should be free of nails and spikes, with no rotten knots. Dead but sound logs will be accepted.

Cedar grows largely in the area served by the Southern Railway and logs will be accepted at any Southern Railway point in the time being, it is not the purpose of the regulations to interfere with necessary economic activities of citizens. Neither will the regulations prevent them from getting essential food and supplies, medical attention, or from performing religious duties. All occupational driving also comes outside the prohibitions of the ban.
