Former Chemical Company Employee Stars In Waves And Show.

RALEIGH, Feb. 27. — North Carolina has become accustomed to reading about Tar Heels setting the pace in the Navy — but now comes another story. This time, it's a North Carolina woman who's made the news.

Six months ago, blonde Virginia Newsome of Burlington was working in Greensboro with a chemical company. Today, she is assigned to radio communications duty with the Navy; she's a petty officer, third class in the Navy; she has the distinction of making the highest average in the first graduating class of Navy Waves — and, to top it off, she has assisted in the direction of (and taken the leading part in) the first Navy theatrical production to use both Waves and Bluejackets in the cast.

Virginia Newsome enlisted in the Waves on October 9, 1942, and was sent to the University of Wisconsin for training in radio. She is the daughter of Mrs. Richard H. Newsome of 919 Park Avenue, Burlington. She starred in the Navy, "Look Alive," which was given last week for the benefit of the Navy Welfare Fund by the Wisconsin Memorial Union. The show was given at the main auditorium of the University of Wisconsin at Madison.

Hundreds of women from all parts of the United States are being sent to the University of Wisconsin and to other similar locations which now are being used by the Navy to train Waves. There is urgent need for thousands of women in the Waves, and a quota of 3,000 has been set for North Carolina alone.

The Navy Recruiting Service is promoting the drive to enlist the women, and are daily accepting applications for scores of women. There are eight Navy recruiting stations in the State, located at Raleigh, Charlotte, Asheville, Winson - Salem and Greensboro and other cities.

Live News from Camp BUTNER

CAMP BUTNER, Feb. 27. — From a mess hall's ice chest to the oxygen tanks at the Station Hospital, ice is supplied by Camp Butner's own ice plant under the supervision of Mr. Carl H. Cofer, a civilian.

"Our most delicate job," states Cofer, "is to maintain the 114 1-2 horse power motor and equipment with the various magnetic and electric controls."

Beginning with the crystal clear water which comes directly from Camp Butner's supply lines, four 300 pound cans are filled from the automatic can filler at one time. These containers are then raised from the can filler by an electric hoist and transmitted by an overhead track to their respective section and submerged in a 15 degree brine. There they remain for thirty hours.

"During the time of freezing," says the supervisor, "filtered air with two pounds of pressure is blown into the containers to assure the purest ice through the agitation of the water."

After the ice is frozen solid, the electric hoist is used again to raise the containers — four at a time — and carry them to the thawing dip tank, which the blocks of ice are loosened. Then they are placed in the ice dump which in turn is tripped by a foot pedal allowing the four crystal clear blocks to slide down the ice chute into the storage room. This storage room, incidentally, has on hand at all times approximately 40 tons of ice.

Issuing the ice throughout the day, seven days a week, falls to Private First Class Anthony Benedetti of the Supply Detachment, Supply Division number one.

The various temperatures of brine, storage room, outside air, and operations pressures are kept at the plant on an hourly log. If an operator has made a change or adjustment, it must be recorded on the log.

The almost impossible search for Nylon stockings penetrated Camp Butner this week but it was all a mistake.

It happened in this manner. Post Exchange No. 1 received a supply of ladies' hose and in the boxes was a statement with the word "nylon" in it. The rush started, rumor-like. Officers' wives called their husbands and some even took the bus to the post — all to get those precious nylons.

But they went home empty-handed for those "nylon" hose turned out to be rayon with only the toes reinforced with nylon threads.

American farmers in 1942 produced 20 percent more feed than in 1939, but 13 per cent of it went to the United States armed forces and to our allies.
