division, gave his interview at Lovell General hospital. Ledbetter, who landed with the first allied wave at St. Cloud last year, said enemy bombers machine-gunned him as he lay on a stretcher on the battlefield. Dive bombing interrupted medical treatment for three hours, he said.

Pvt. Ledbetter was first reported as wounded last December, but it was several months before members of his family were informed further as to his condition. He returned to the United States a few weeks ago and only a short time before he arrived he was heard on a broadcast from a British base hospital, presumably in the British Isles.

Describing circumstances of the action in which he was wounded, Ledbetter said his company had been sent to support British infantry headed for Mateur when it ran into mortar and machine gun fire on three sides. They were ordered to the rear to reorganize and were waiting near a railroad when the dive bombers came.

"An enemy barrage was laid down by dive bombers," he said. "My tank was hit just as we were going to drop back because the fighting was too hot. Continuous waves of three to five dive bombers kept coming over and about wiped out three companies of infantry tanks.

"The first two bombs landed a few feet from my tank. I started over the side, but the third bomb made a direct hit and got me on the legs. The gasoline in the tank exploded and thousands of rounds of ammunition went up."

With his legs shattered, he crawled away from the tank. Two soldiers dragged him near the railroad embankment and administered first aid.

"The dive bombing kept up. And as I lay on the stretcher, a Stuka put three machine gun bullets in my left leg," he said.

While Ledbetter was in the British first-aid clearing station at Bone, it was bombed and patients spent two days in a garage for safety. Later, a French hospital train took three days and nights to carry him and other patients 250 miles to Algiers after enemy bombers blew up the tracks.

NEW STOP LAW FOR MOTORISTS CITED BY MRS.

"Section 1. That every person using, operating, or driving a motor vehicle upon or over the roads or highways of the State of North Carolina, or upon or over any of the streets of any of the incorporated towns and cities of North Carolina, upon approaching from any direction on the same highway any school bus transporting school children to or from school, while such bus is stopped and engaged in receiving or discharging passengers therefrom upon the roads or highways of the State or upon any of the streets of any of the incorporated towns and cities of the State, shall bring such motor vehicle to a full stop before passing or attempting to pass such bus and shall remain stopped until said passengers are received or discharged at that place and until the "stop signal" of such bus has been withdrawn or until such bus has moved on.

"The provisions of this section are applicable only in the event the school bus bears upon the front and rear thereof a plainly visible sign containing the words 'school bus' in letters not less than five inches in height."

SLOWER PACE WILL BE FEATURE OF NEW SEASON

during the harvest season, brought above the proposed changes in the auction structure.

Governor J. M. Broughton, who earlier in the year promised North Carolina farmers a solution to their labor problems, believes the plan, if accepted by all concerned, will definitely affect the farm labor situation and that it will help farmers to comply with Government requests for more food crops.

Earlier, the Governor called for some disposition of the apparent conflict between the marketing of tobacco and the harvesting of other crops. He said that the auction system tended to absorb labor that otherwise would be busy on the farms. In calling for a solution to the auction problem, the Governor made known that he would call a marketing holiday in North Carolina in the event of an emergency. He also said that "our failure to solve the labor problems relating to the auctioning of tobacco and harvesting of other essential food crops would put us in the hands of those who would destroy the auction system."

Under the slow-down proposal, these flue-cured market opening dates would be effective, provided they are approved by the sales committee of the United States Tobacco Association:

Georgia-Florida Belt, July 27; South Carolina-Border Belt, Aug. 3; Eastern Carolina, Aug. 19; Middle, Aug. 31; Old Belt, Sept. 7. The Eastern Carolina Belt may be opened earlier if conditions permit.

Meanwhile, a survey of present crop conditions in the State by W. P. Hedrick, tobacco marketing specialist of the State Department of Agriculture, shows that the crop in most areas is more than two weeks behind schedule.

However, Hedrick's report stated that the crop in most areas is "satisfactory," particularly in the Eastern Belt where planting has been completed and a yield of more than 1,000 pounds an acre in prospect.

Cold weather and plant diseases were given as cause for the delay, aside from labor shortages.

In the Middle and Old Belts, Hedrick's report showed more than 75 per cent of the crop has been planted. Plenty of plants are available to complete the crop.

Hedrick's report also said that virtually all tobacco farmers in the State were taking advantage of the AAA's increase of 5 per cent in acreage allotments, and that the growers were working longer hours in an effort to overcome current labor shortages.

"Farmers generally believe that the labor situation will be less acute at harvest time and are planning their production accordingly. Any change in the auction season will be acceptable to most of them," he said.

"However, it is doubtful if the North Carolina markets will be far enough advanced to open the Burley Belt markets on the first Monday in December, as has been the custom in the past," he added. "This is due to the lateness of the crop in this State and the labor shortages that will be encountered as the season advances."

R. L. HARRIS HAS JOB FOR NEXT MONDAY

Other speakers will be Dean Jackson, Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of University of North Carolina, and Miss Mary Jo Randleman, Anna, III, selected by her classmates as spokesman for the graduates.

Commencement exercises begin Saturday with alumnae and senior class day exercises. Annual business meeting of the alumnae association, recognizing Mrs. W. L. Lambert, Ashboro, as new president succeeding Mrs. John Dickson, Philadelphia, will be held at 2 p. m. Capt. Westray Battle Boyce, WAAC service command director of the army service forces, headquarters of the fourth service command, Atlanta, Ga., a former student, will speak at a dinner held for the alumnae at 6:30 p. m.

A guest performance by Playmakers at 8:30 p. m. in Aycock auditorium of "Letters to Lucerne" will be given to honor seniors, their parents, alumnae and other commencement visitors. Senior class day exercises will be held at 4:30 p. m. on Front campus.

Among Roxboro girls who will graduate from Woman's college are Misses Carolyn White and Helen Reid Sanfers.
