FIFTEEN-INCH SHELLS from the guns of the battleship "Warspite," lying off the beaches of Salerno, helped blast a path for the advancing American Fifth Army and accompanying British troops. This picture shows British sailors hoisting one of these massive shells aboard the "Warspite"—veteran of Jutland in World War I and of Narvik, Crete and Cape Matapan in this war.

fields knocked out of operation cannot be told for military reasons, Colonel Anderson said that "the efficiency of the German operational units has been appreciably lowered by our steady bombing, which is keeping them on the run."

"It has been proved by experience that enemy fighter units can be forced to abandon air-dromes," said Colonel Anderson, "and that is what we are doing—not so much by bombing landing fields, which can be repaired, but by wrecking permanent installations such as barracks, hangars, machine shops and radio control facilities."

During the last week alone it was disclosed that three air fields were knocked off the Marauder target list. Colonel Anderson pointed to this as evidence that the Marauder crews are rapidly improving their technique.

Among the key-airdromes of which have been hammered hardest is the one at Abbeville, home of the famed "Abbeville Kids" of Hermann Goering's yellow nose squadron which bomber crews have found especially tough.

The more nazis that can be kicked around by the Marauders, Colonel Anderson explained, the easier it becomes for their big brothers, Flying Fortresses and RAF Lancasters, to penetrate deeper into the heart of Germany.

Meanwhile, he said, the B-26 crews are building up valuable combat experience for the time when the tactics will change into direct support of ground operations.

Little of the real drama behind the rise to fame of these fast, twin-engined "flying cigars" is told in the cold, factual phrases of the day-to-day communique, but it is one of the spectacular features of the air war.

The Marauders began their operations from Britain last May with a low-level attack on a power station in Holland by 12 planes. All returned, but badly shot up. The second and last low-level mission was against an unidentified target May 17. And here they had even worse luck.

The experiment having failed, the outfit was shifted from the bomber command to the support command and resumed operations at a medium altitude—10,000 to 14,000 feet—with a fighter escort. Since then they have flown approximately 4,000 sorties on 75 missions and have lost only 13 planes.

Marauder claims against enemy fighters are 18 destroyed, 12 probably destroyed and 17 damaged. RAF Spitfires while shepherding them have knocked down something like 200.

Besides air fields, the medium bombers have severely damaged railway yards and dock facilities.

NEED PROTECTION TOO!

UNCLE SAM realizes the value and importance of life insurance protection for our fighting men and makes it available to them. But the people who serve on the fighting fronts at home must plan their own futures and provide their own protection. How?

To men and women on the home front the Jefferson Standard offers "Planned Protection"—the finest type of life insurance coverage available. Your Jefferson Standard man will be glad to help you select the plan best suited to your needs.

The judges for both contests were Miss Venetia Hearne, Teacher of Home Economics at Roxboro high school; Miss Sara Rice, of the Hurdle Mills school; and Miss Willa Lee Joyner, of Helena school.

Mary Elizabeth Slaughter, past president of the County Council, presided over the entire meeting. Peggy Jane Warren presented the devotional.

The Home Agent and Assistant Farm Agent welcomed the parents and 4-H Leaders present.

Mrs. Eunice W. Williams, Home Agent of Granville County, and Miss Kathleen Barber, Teacher of Home Economics in Oxford High School, were special guests.

The 4-H Council and Extension Agents wish to thank Peebles' Department Store, Leggett's Department Store, Farmers Supply Company, and Long, Bradsher and Company for the prizes donated to the winner of first place in each contest.

Dean I. O. Schaub, Director of State College Extension Service, and Miss Ruth Current, State Home Demonstration Agent, inaugurated "Home Demonstration Mobilization Drive" in North Carolina in a radio address Friday, October 1st.

The months of October, November, and December have been designated as Mobilization Months in an effort to reach every rural homemaker with the Expansion program. The motto of the drive is "Every member bring a member". Thus one of the goals is to double the enrollment in Home Demonstration Clubs during October, November and December. The Neighborhood Leader organization will also be used to carry the information to the "last family at the end of the road".

Other members of the Extension Staff will be on the Farm Journal program over WPTF Friday, October 8th, to discuss further the 1944 program of work for Home Demonstration Clubs in North Carolina.
