COOK'S CASH STORE IS NAMED DEALER

Announcement in the form of a two-color printed certificate reached A. T. Cook today that the Cook's Cash Store had been named authorized dealer for Anvil Brand utility garments, as one of a select group of stores especially appointed by the manufacturers, the High Point Overall Co., High Point, N. C.

Entitled "Certificate of Co-operation," the document received points out that a broader public service in supplying work garments can be brought about by a closer relationship between the manufacturers and the local store, and the manufacturing company offers new and expanded forms of merchandising and promotion assistance in helping the local institution supply its trade area with Anvil Brand goods.

"Some time ago," Mr. Cook said, "the company's salesman who travels this territory, went into considerable detail about plans which the High Point people are putting into effect, in the effort to insure a steadier supply of utility clothing. War shortages caused by an unprecedented demand for textiles by the armed forces, have made all types of work garments exceedingly scarce for months. Even now, according to trade news, weaving mills are only just beginning to complete their reconversion for heavy production of civilian fabrics. So there will be an inescapable continuing shortage of garments made of denim, covert, whipcord and similar weaves."

Some goods under the new arrangement are expected soon, the local merchant added. But as is the case with so many items in all departments of the store, steadily increased supplies for consumers cannot be expected in volume for some little time.
