K. A. Peoples, Raleigh, was found guilty of violating the Unemployment Compensation Law by filing claims and receiving benefits of unemployment compensation for 12 weeks while fully employed, and was sentenced to 12 months on the roads by Judge Paul Smith in City Court last week. Peoples was found guilty of filing claims and drawing $18.50 a week for 12 weeks while drawing $35 to $37.50 a week for work in a grocery store. David G. Ball, UCC claims deputy, brought the charge and his evidence was corroborated by the grocery store operator. Judge Smith's sentence requires road work for two months, the remaining ten months' sentence being suspended on condition that Peoples reimburse the UCC for the $203.50 unlawfully received, and remain on probation for five years.

VETERANS GET EXAMINATIONS FOR DIPLOMAS

Veterans wishing to take examinations for high school diplomas in the newly established veterans' testing center at the court house in Asheville may do so every Saturday until further notice, according to Dr. C. D. Killian, professor of psychology and education at Western Carolina Teachers college, Cullowhee, who is supervising the test there.

The examinations have been offered on the last two Fridays and Saturdays and originally were given each Monday. Eleven students took the tests Friday and more than 100 have taken them since their inception there in May.

A majority of those taking the examinations, offered through the armed forces institute, have passed, Dr. Killian said. "Nearly all" of those with recent schooling handed in passing examinations, he said.
