Announce Plans To Promote Sale Of Savings Bonds

RALEIGH, N. C.—Plans for promoting the sale of U. S. Savings Bonds during the campaign which began November 11 and will continue through December 7 were discussed at the monthly meeting of the N. C. agricultural council, which is composed of officials of Federal agricultural agencies and State farm organizations. The meeting was held in the Production and Marketing administration office at State college, last Friday, November 15.

G. Tom Scott, chairman of the council, presided and presented Allison James, State Director of the U. S. Savings Bonds division for North Carolina, and Ted Merrill, assistant state director, both of Greensboro. James outlined reasons for the campaign and requested the continued cooperation of agricultural agencies.

"We have had good weather, good crops, and good farm prices for the longest period in our history," James said. "This has created an unparalleled opportunity for farmers to buy financial security for the future by investing a good portion of this year's income in U. S. Savings Bonds—the safest security in the world."

Scott said, on behalf of the State USDA Council and its membership, that the Savings Bonds campaign would receive hearty support. He said that already the office of production and marketing administration, of which he is State director, had mailed out, through its county committeemen, 250,000 Savings Bonds inserts and application forms in their regular mailings to farmers.

"We are of the opinion that a financial reserve in Savings Bonds will go a long way to eliminate a slump in the future," Scott said. "Many of us remember what happened immediately after World War I and all of us hope it will be different this time. A financial reserve is just as important to farmers as land, live stock, and equipment and we know of no better financial reserve than United States Savings Bonds."
