POET'S CORNER

WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA

She marshals her peaks upon rugged blue walls

Against the round rim of the sky,

And tempers the fury of every storm

That crosses these barriers high.

She holds within moss-covered caverns of stone,

No thrift of a summer can drain,

Perennial meltings of sleet and of snow

And storage of yesteryear's rain;

These, slowly released through and ravine

To dance and make music with Pan,

Out into rivers unceasingly flow

For the service and pleasure of man.

She hallows the silence of forested coves

That nestle her ridges between,

And ladens each breeze with a healing perfume

Where hemlock and balsam are green.

Her sentinels burnish their helmets with gold

Awakening day to receive,

And borrow his embers aglow in the west

To purple their mantles at eve.

Then after the twilight's slow requiem tolls

And shadows the valleys en-wrap,

She garlands her summits with glittering stars

And cradles the clouds in her lap.

TOO LATE FOR WORDS!

Painfully, slowly, a message is tapped on a dungeon wall. It's a familiar message—one heard a thousand times over in a dozen countries of Europe and Asia.

LISTEN . . . it's a message of lost hope, of lost rights and freedom!
LISTEN . . . for this message is a warning for those of us who still are free!

We in America are willingly giving up some of our rights and freedoms—temporarily. As the price of rearming, we're giving government vast powers over our plans, our businesses, our very lives.

The danger is that these powers may become permanent. There are people—in and out of government—who say they should—even though that means a socialistic U.S.A.

Unless all of us remember the difference between temporary emergency powers and permanent socialism, it may some day be "too late" for Americans, too!

There is Nothing Finer than to Live in North Carolina

Next month—August—our mountains and our beaches will play host to thousands—with emphasis on play.

But to other thousands of our people it's cotton picking time; and in many of our towns the chant of the tobacco auctioneer makes important music this month.

There's always work to do in North Carolina, but there are other things that are important, too. So remember the Whiteville Tobacco Festival; the Brevard Music Festival, August 7-19; the N. C. Federation of Labor meeting in Asheville, August 13-15; and N. C. semi-pro baseball championships Roxboro, August 2.

And, at home or vacationing, most of us can enjoy a cool, temperate glass of beer—sold under our ABC system of legal control that is working so well.
