POET'S CORNER

"BLACK MOUNTAIN, N. C." A magic spell possesses all who come! The circling mountains hold out welcoming arms; Summer's gay throngs and evening cool wins some Others, bush blooms of spring or autumn's charms.

The cherry cardinal flashing through the green, The rippling call of wren when hope is gone, The woodland thrush, flute-like in song, unseen, In benediction blessing each new home;

Then steady pace of ever-widening friends, Something of mind and heart in interests found, Real comradeship, and glow that morning sends— These make it home, a bit of Holy Ground.

—Mary Wooster Young
Miss Young is one of the charter members and an ex-chairman of the creative writing group, as well as one of the founders of the re-organized Black Mountain Arts Club. She is from New York, but has found her "bit of Holy Ground", as others have found it, in Black Mountain. This poem expresses her love—the "bewitchment" that lured and held her here as it has lured and held the "Poet's Corner" chairman who considers Black Mountain the most beautiful and desirable "spot" in America for a home.

ANY DAY NOW

Your guess is as good as anyone's, but one of these days before long a customer of Carolina Power and Light Company will buy and install the one-hundred-thousandth electric range in the territory served by the Company. One hundred thousand electric ranges are a lot of ranges, but when you consider all the advantages electric cooking offers there is small wonder that more and more of them are being sold and installed every day.

The home in which the 100,000th electric range will be installed could be YOUR home. Ask your electric dealer why it would serve your advantage to be the 100,000th purchaser.

BACK TO ILLINOIS

Mrs. A. C. Steinke and children Ruth and Charles, of La Grange Park, Ill., will return home sometime within the next few days after having visited Mr. and Mrs. B. Olson and Mrs. Louise How. Mrs. Olson and Mrs. Steinke are sisters and Mrs. Steinke is their mother.

During two world wars the aluminum and copper industries of our country have played a vital part in winning these conflicts against aggressor nations. The great oil refineries of our country which through highly technical research produces super-heated and jet fuels for air war are equipped with the tools and machinery made possible through the use of copper and copper alloys. Without the red metal and its many versatile alloys no war could be won.
