actively any political candidate was introduced by Member Davis and unanimously adopted. Board Chairman Miles Smith of Salisbury said later that the resolution was not directed at Governor Scott.

Smith apparently didn't know what he was talking about, for Davis stated flatly that the resolution was directed at the governor. He said that Governor Scott's support of Olive prompted the resolution. Wrote Davis: "Mr. Scott is for Hubert Olive and I am for William Umstead. But that gives neither of us the right to bring pressure on state employees to compel their support of either candidate."

State employees, carefully approached on the subject last Friday, said no pressure had as yet been applied to them. One coy young thing asserted she had never voted, and was standing around waiting for the pressure.

The Weather—This is finger-crossing weather in the Sandhills. Blooms and peach buds—as this is written—hang on the trees. But tomorrow, tonight, tomorrow morning, frost may move in and ruin the crop, cripple it, or merely dance around, touching lightly here and playing rugged havoc over there. This is finger-crossing time in the Sandhills.

Orchardists watch the nights like soldiers top-toeing in a mined field.

Meantime, Northwestern North Carolina is looking with longing eyes at dollars coined in the Sandhills during those rare seasons when frost doesn't damage. It isn't just the cold which hits the bloom and kills the fruit. The frost kiss is the death kiss.

State college folks report that on the high ridges of the Mount Airy section of the state weather is no major problem with peaches. John W. Olive operates a 300-acre orchard out from Mount Airy. He has never experienced a complete crop loss because of the weather.
