Disciples Will End Meet Today

Education, inspiration and Christian fellowship will come ahead of traditional church business when North Carolina Disciples of Christ hold their 108th annual convention at Hillier Memorial Christian church in Raleigh, Nov. 11-13.

That is the word of Dr. R. Frederick West, host pastor. Only two brief sessions will be devoted to business, he said. The rest of the three-day program will go toward getting ministers and lay leaders from all sections of North Carolina better acquainted. For the first time, there will be workshops for training youth leaders and for educational work in Christian stewardship.

Mrs. Chester Miller continues to be very ill.

I. T. Brooks has been remodeling his home these last few weeks. The work looks to be nearing completion. The Brookses have recently bought a television.

Ed Davis and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Will Burnette of Asheville, visited us last Sunday afternoon. These are some of Minnie's relatives, and we had a delightful talk-fest.

Charles Taylor and family came out for a short visit Sunday night before church.

Minnie and this reporter will have supper with Mr. and Mrs. Bob Harvey of the Paggett town section this Saturday night. We will be around about five o'clock, so, Bob, you can butcher that chicken, for we surely do enjoy Cary's culinary accomplishments.

We went to revival services at Homer's Chapel last Saturday night and had a very good time. The Rev. Mr. Higgins delivered a most inspiring sermon, after which we greeted a host of friends. While reaching across the head of a little girl to shake hands with a husky brother, we accidentally caught some of her hair in our grasp, and just about scalped the poor child before we noticed what we were doing. As soon as we get time we will tell you the story of the lecture at Homer's Chapel, if you would like to hear it. We went on to the Rock church's singing where we rendered a couple of numbers, and then to Vaden Marrett's where Minnie entertained the company with ghost stories until almost one o'clock.

Mrs. Julius A. Walker has not been feeling very well lately.

Sunday, Oct. 2, there was a big dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Cordell in honor of their fifty-third anniversary. Almost all the children and grand children were present.
