Vicar's Corner

The Rev. W. Scott Root

The new year is upon us; a week old. There's a word that I've been wanting to look at for a long time in this column and to analyse with you. That word is responsibility. All of us are long on something, on wanting to be smarter, better at our job, more generous and understanding at home, or stronger in our belief in God. But I'll wager there's not one person in one hundred, who, seeing his responsibility in any of these matters, has accepted them fully. Who, on dedicating his life to serve God has gone all the way in all the things required of stewards? Not me. And I'll bet not you either!

Responsibility. That's the thing we have the hardest time teaching the growing child. The lack of responsibility is that which causes more trouble than anything else.

Once, a man named Jesus accepted His responsibility to God and man. In His act lies the model for our acceptance of responsibility. Not my will, but Thine.

Thursday, January 7, 1953 — Black Mountain (NC) NEWS - 5

Wars are caused because men lack responsibility to other men. Jobs are lost because we lack it. Homes are broken because one partner or both have not accepted it. It's not a word of emotion but one of sheer will: doing what we must because we must. But it's easy to shove it aside.

I think most of the great philosophers and teachers have said all this better before and in more understandable terms but here it is again: if each person would accept even the smallest responsibilities of his day to day life, the world would rumble with the joy and goodness let loose. That's right; just the little things: a kind word in the morning to members of the family; a word of praise to the employee; getting in the homework; coming to church with regularity; sweeping in the corners.

Once, a man named Jesus accepted His responsibility to God and man. In His act lies the model for our acceptance of responsibility. Not my will, but Thine.
