This is the Law

By Fred L. Davis
(For the N. C. Bar Association)

Administrative Law.
The average person thinks of law as falling into one of two categories: legislative action or court action. He knows generally that the legislature passes laws, the executive branch of the government administers these laws, and the judicial branch of the government hears cases in which it is alleged that these laws have been broken.

On Tuesday afternoon, July 27, a reception was given to Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Hopper by the Women of the Montreat church in the garden of the home of Dr. and Mrs. L. Nelson Bell on Assembly drive. Those in the receiving line were: Dr. and Mrs. L. Nelson Bell, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Hopper, Mrs. John Nisbet, and Dr. and Mrs. L. J. Coppedge.

On Thursday, August 5, the church extension conference will have their opening session in Anderson Auditorium at 8 p. m.

On Friday evening at 7:45 p. m. Dr. Charles B. "Chuck" Templeton, evangelist, National Council of Churches, New York, N. Y., will be the speaker.

Mrs. Kenneth Close and daughter, Carolyn of Miami, Fla., are in their cottage, "Close Quarters" on Louisiana road, ext. for a few weeks. They have as guests Mrs. Charles Martin of Miami, Fla., and Mrs. Helen Arthur of Bedford, Va.

Miss Evelyn Jackson and sister Mrs. Vaughn have sold their cottage on Louisiana road, ext. to the Rev. Bob White of Georgia. The Rev. and Mrs. Lave and family of Cleveland, Tenn., are in the Jackson cottage for the month of August.

The Rev. and Mrs. John Abernethy and children of Coshocton, Ohio are spending the month of August in the Abernethy cottage on Georgia terrace.

Major Legal Field.
This activity has expanded in America - and in North Carolina - to the extent that administrative law is one of the major fields in legal practice today.

How can the average taxpayer protect himself? He can and does join various organizations to present his views to the administrative agency. He enlists the aid of his legislator in many cases, and he writes letters to the newspapers in an effort to arouse public opinion.

But the greatest help the individual can get in such matters is from his attorney. Many students of administrative law believe that the greatest assistance a lawyer can give his client lies in this field.

Yet this assertion runs against the feeling of many men, who reason that they are not going "into court" in a matter before an administrative body and consequently do not need an attorney.

The competent lawyer, however, will be familiar with the procedures of any agency before which he appears. He will know when his client's rights are being trampled. He understands the rules of evidence, and knows what evidence will be considered relevant by the particular administrative body hearing his client's case. He

Wade H. Rowland Finishes Course

Cadet Wade R. Rowland, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Rowland, Black Mountain, has recently completed six weeks of ROTC summer camp training at Fort McClellan, Ala. Rowland will return to Wake Forest college this fall as a senior. After graduation next June he will be commissioned as a second lieutenant in the army's chemical corps.

The six-weeks summer encampment consisted of basic infantry training. Rowland knows how to prepare his client's petition in order to have an administrative decision reviewed by the courts of law, if that should be necessary. And his training and experience tells him when an appeal would be proper.

Types of Cases.
The cost of telephone calls, the granting of radio licenses, the suspension of beer and wine licenses, the evaluation of property for tax purposes, the location of highways, the size of oyster dredges allowed by law, the passage of municipal ordinances - all these decisions and thousands more are in the field of administrative law, and determine your rights. Your attorney can advise you of steps to be taken and the probable results of any dispute with even greater certainty than he can advise you of the probable outcome of a lawsuit.
