A 12-inch candle gives one candlepower of light, would cost about $1.30 per hour for candles to equal light of a 100-watt bulb.
Early electricity cost about 25 cents per kilowatt-hour. Now the average CP&L residential customer pays an average of 2.2 cents.
Edison's first bulb burned 40 hours. In early production, it cost about $1.30 to make. Now bulbs last months or years, cost a small fraction of this.
Modern 100-watt bulb gives the light of 130 candles and can be used for five hours for one cent.
Cost of living is up, but CP&L electricity is cheaper. The cost of a kilowatt-hour gets as low as 1 1/2 cents... one cent with an electric water heater.

CP&L Dedicates Huge, New Power Plant On Day of "Light's Diamond Jubilee"

MAN'S GREATEST DISCOVERY for the sake of progress and happiness is being celebrated Thursday, October 21. On this date 75 years ago, Thomas A. Edison invented the first practical electric light— forerunner of the multitude of electrical "helpers" that today are vital to home, farm, factory and office.

IN CELEBRATING the event, it is fitting that Carolina Power & Light choose this date to dedicate its newest and most modern steam electric generating plant, located four miles from Wilmington, N. C. With it, we honor the genius of Edison—the faith of 365,000 CP&L customers—the confidence of 30,000 stockholders—and the dedication of 2,300 CP&L employees.

ITS TONS OF IRON AND STEEL were made in a "million pieces" but now they fit together with the precision of your watch. Jets of steam, five times hotter than boiling water fly through the giant turbine, which spins faster than the speed of sound... 27 carloads of coal burn in the great furnace each day... more water than Wilmington uses in a month pours through the condensers in 24 hours, all returning to the peaceful Cape Fear River just as pure as when it entered the plant.

THE FIRST UNIT generates enough electricity for nearly a million and a quarter 9-foot refrigerators! This is equivalent to 150,000 horsepower of electricity.

SEE LIGHT'S DIAMOND JUBILEE TV SHOW
Every network TV Station... 9-11 P.M., Sunday, October 24!

Towering 17 stories high, this new plant uses air, coal and water as raw materials to produce more "electrical living" for Carolinians.

Unit No. 2, in operation next year, will double the horsepower, and space is set aside for four more units as they are needed.

JUST AS we consider it a privilege to serve you, we consider it a vital responsibility to build for your future needs. When you are ready for the pleasures of air conditioning, an electric range, water heater, a "bright conditioned" home, and the more than one hundred other modern conveniences, plenty of electricity will be yours to command.
