Now Glasses Do "Double-Duty" You See and HEAR With Them

vision correction is not the only function of these eyeglasses. "Hearing Glasses" as they are called by the manufacturer, The Maico Company, Minneapolis, Minnesota, have a hearing aid built into the bows of the glasses. The special bows can be attached to a person's present frames. The manufacturer states that most hearing losses can be corrected with "Hearing Glasses."

men in person who could make it up the 50 feet of rope, with no knots, climb through a box-like structure without getting knocked unconscious, and make his way down the tree. That was part of the obstacle course we inherited.

The sergeant said the 102nd did it but I never did believe him. When we took over their training ground, we thought for sure that it was something that had been prepared special. Arnold made me very unhappy by verifying what sarg has always claimed. It had been there before.

Just to set the record straight — I never did get up that rope and through the "tree house". No matter how nice the sergeant talked and how much he pleaded, I always fell a few feet short. One day he really exploded, blew his top in a better expression, and yelled at a GI who couldn't make it either. "What would you do if there was a German in that little house?" To which the private replied, not making himself any more popular by so doing:

"If they was fool enough to get up there they could get down by theirself."

He wasn't too grammatical but there was logic in what he said.

Mrs. Crawford Given Watch

The executive board of the Black Mountain Woman's club held its last meeting at the home of Mrs. Willard K. Weeks at Ridgecrest. Mrs. W. A. Pate was co-hostess with Mrs. Weeks. A social hour was enjoyed prior to the business meeting and refreshments were served from a beautifully appointed table. Mrs. W. A. Allison poured coffee.

Main business of the meeting was the discussion of proposed revisions to the club's constitution, following a report from Mrs. L. C. Jumper, parliamentarian. She was co-chairman of the legislative committee with Miss Elizabeth Hoyt, the club legislative chairman. A recommendation was made that the revised constitution and by-laws be mimeographed and a copy given to each club member at the next meeting for study; the constitution to be voted on at the April meeting. Other business was discussed and recommendations voted upon to be presented by the board at the general meeting.

At the conclusion of the board meeting, Mrs. James A. Crawford, president, was presented a farewell gift from the executive board members, a beautiful engraved gold wrist watch. Mrs. Walter A. Davis, 3rd vice-president, made the presentation and expressed the affection and appreciation of the group, and their good wishes for Mrs. Crawford in her new home in New Jersey.

COATI

©1954 National Wildlife Federation

Whether we read the accounts of early explorer naturalists or those of current tourists in Mexico and Central America we are likely to hear of the antics of coatis. They may be seen in zoos but they apparently are at their best in a semi-wild condition where they are frequent visitors to camps.

A male Coati may measure over four feet with half this length being a highly eloquent tail. The animals may stand a foot high at the shoulder and weigh nearly 30 pounds. Usually they are smaller however, with the males being larger than females.

Coatis walk flat footed and each foot shows five toe marks. The nail marks may or may not show. The track looks something like that of a cat only it is half again as large and the toe pads are more elongated and are usually closer together.

It is reasonable that these animals should remind one of a raccoon because the two animals are closely related. Coatis like raccoons can swim, climb and are good travelers on the ground and they are more likely to be active in the day time than are the raccoons, and are apparently least active around midnight or noon.

Like raccoons Coatis feed upon a variety of things. They may eat birds and their eggs, insects in various stages of development, crawfish, mussels, squirrels, mice and other small animals. They also like fruits such as apples, peaches and berries.

The young are born in spring or early summer about 11 weeks after mating. There are usually from 4 to 6 young in a litter.

Coatis are found within the United States—in Texas, Arizona and New Mexico—but always rather close to the Mexican border. Apparently they are pushing their range farther to the north as seems to be the case with so many other animals.

Coatis are clowns when they want to be. They have a varied group of sounds which they produce — grunts, screams, snorts, whistles and hisses — with each probably signifying a different reaction of the animal to the situation in which it finds itself.

This unique mammal is of interest to the student of nature who visits its range in the Southwest United States. And despite its occasional troublesome habits where it lives near man, it has a definite place in those animal communities of which it is a part — E. Laurence Palmer.
