for band and choral music in the Swannanoa Valley schools have met and have formulated plans for this year's cooperative community

The committee is hopeful that sometime in the future this kind of school program can be financed entirely from either county or state funds. For the present, however, it will have to continue the same way as it was set up last year. It was financed through contributions from clubs and organizations, some county assistance, and a small tuition charge from students.

The band uniforms are paid for, and the band is making a very nice appearance at the football games and other places where it has performed.

The choral group last year was called on to appear many places in the community and even to other county schools and to events in Asheville. It will again render
