BEHIND THE SCENES—

of everyone, they arrived unsmilingly. With all the concrete work, painting, set construction and countless other jobs to be done, this was a terrific blow. Time was at a premium, tempers were frayed, energies wearing down. Then this had to happen. When last seen "Stymie" was upstairs in the huge hayloft helping "Sarge" and Chuck put those seats together and bolt them down. Unlike his master (although I believe cats prefer to express it in reverse) he is so determined to be an actor that he went on-stage one night without even rehearsing, and stole one scene in "See How They Run." Evidently he prefers the comedy roles.

He is not the only four-footed devotee of the theater. There is the "Smiling Dog" who adopted the whole company from the beginning but is Co-Producer Tinka Crawford's special fan. She says that no matter how difficult the day when this light-hearted, smiling dog appears everyone brightens up. He has been named "Sooner Dog" for the Sooner hound famed in fiction. This "Sooner Dog" is not a hound, however. He is fluffy and pert looking and would "sooner" laugh than cry. He also helps out in other ways.

He was observed helping producer-actor Tinka the day before "Open House" when she and another actor were painting the lobby, or the Green Room, as it is called by theater people. "Sooner Dog," Tinka and Elaine Hunter all emerged looking closely related to "Bloody Charles" as they had been using red paint on the lounge seats in the Green room. Incidentally, calling the lobby the Green room, especially when it is in blue, safe-iron and red, is quite confusing to many people. The Green room title comes down through the years in theater. It was in the Green room that actors and actresses used to meet their friends and fans for coffee or champagne and conversation between acts and after the show. It is an English tradition. The Green room of the Siro Circle playhouse is being used as a show-case for paintings by regional artists and a few artists from far away places, the farthest away being France.

One of the theater patrons suggested another name for the lobby "The Trough Room," because, when the theater was used as a barn, the cows ate out of big concrete troughs in this room and now those concrete troughs have been cleverly converted into attractive barn-red lounging seats for the patrons. The painting of these was one of those last-minute jobs that caused a great deal of anxiety—the whole company prayed they would be dry enough next day for the open house. Fortunately, their prayers were answered. The conversion of the feeding troughs into comfortable lounging seats for the lobby is only one example of ingenious utilization of what was already there in the barn. Next we'll tell you more and also about some of the humorous incidents that have occurred—(humorous now—not at the time!)

July 29, 1948

The Black Mountain All-Stars lost a 10 to 1 heart-breaker to the Enka 9 of the City Softball league. The Black Mountain line-up: N. Harris, c; Stephenson, p; Gardner, 1b; Rudisill, 2b; Hensley, 3c; Smolenski, 3b; H. Gray, lf; D. Turner, cf; B. Maret, rf.

The Black Mountain News reported that visitors were still using parking meters—putting their nickels in, although a recent City Council meeting had outlawed the meters and they were due to be removed by the company which installed them. The News reminded that there was no more need to "put a nickel in the slot" (a policy which has been entirely reversed in recent years—again making the nickel—or a proper number of pennies—quite necessary, indeed).

The Presbyterians opened the second half of the season with a 6-2 baseball victory over Ridgecrest.

In accordance with Ridgecrest tradition, staff members observed their annual "Christmas in July." A Christmas pageant was presented and Santa Claus distributed gifts.

Numerous citizens were urging the State Highway department to place stop-and-go lights at the intersection of Blue Ridge road and the main highway, Route 70.
