WITH SHARP KNIVES, THE LADIES RETURNED!

The National Home Furnishings Show (New York City, 1957) had a display (among many, many others) called "The Celestial Nursery of the Future."
That nursery was really "out of this world." "Heavenly!" and "Divine!" were just two comments frequently voiced by the N. Y. C. ladies attending the show. They asked questions, too.
"What is the floor?" they asked often. (And no wonder; it was a beautiful blue floor—smooth surfaced, quietly resilient, subtly colored, full of glittering metallics! All this and clear vinyl, too!) "Where can we buy one just like it?" (New York ladies speak emphatically.)

They were told the floor wasn't on the market, that it couldn't be matched anywhere. But the ladies didn't give up. They returned again and again to admire the floor. Some even brought sharp little knives and tried to help themselves to sample swatches of it!

The floor is on the market now. It's called Armstrong Vinyl Corlon in the new Futuresq Series. We've got it—the beautiful blue one, plus seven more exciting colors. But please, leave your knives at home! If you like it as much as the ladies at the Home Furnishings Show, we'll give you a little sample.

It happened last Sunday in a church nursery for tiny tots. (The nursery is for children's care while Mom and Dad attend church services): A dainty little Miss expressed the wish for Mommy to come and take her home. When told that the service would soon be over and mother would afterward come for her, she said, "Oh, Mommy is not in church, she is at home." Sure enough, before the service ended, Mommy drove up and fulfilled the little girl's wish.
