ten and be caught in her web... a traffic accident of their own making.

What they haven't as yet been made to understand is that nobody gets away with anything indefinitely... and this includes traffic law violations.

Even if they are never caught by an officer of the law, they will be caught sooner or later by their own lawlessness.

If anyone had an easy solution to this problem of disregard and disrespect for our traffic laws and regulations, he would deserve at least a Nobel Prize for doing a great service to humanity. However, no such "sure thing" seems to be in the offing. So for the present, we must continue to rely on the tried and true: Education, Engineering and Enforcement.

Many Think High Speed Okay If You Don't Get Caught

"Wow! Am I ever lucky. I was hitting 70 all the way and didn't see a single patrolman!"

Familiar statement? All too familiar. And sure it's okay, as long as you don't get caught.

The attitude of a great many people is that anything goes as long as you can get away with it, when it comes to the observance of traffic laws and traffic regulations.

Safety officials of the State Motor Vehicles department know that this attitude is a sign of more basic failings in today's society, but they also know that they alone can't cure the ills of the entire society. It is impossible to put a state trooper along every mile of highway, but people such as we've been talking about can't be trusted to police themselves.

However, even these people are caught sooner or later by Lady Luck. They will, almost invariably, test her powers once too often.
