Mountain Musings

By Gene Byrd

Thank you, dear readers, for the continued kind remarks about the column. May I assure you that the feeling is mutual and I look forward to my weekly visits with you. Again our attention is called to the uncertainty of this present life. Our love and sympathy goes out to the Worleys, the Moores and others who have been added to the mourning and bereaved families of our community. Veritably there is a great company of saddened people around us.

Stalwart Figure Missed
In the midst of the sad events that have taken place, a stalwart figure is missed. One of the greatest of funeral sermonizers, a pillar of strength in time of need, that noble "Fisherman of the Hills", Wayne Williams, who passed away last fall, could do more to lift the weight than perhaps anyone I have heard. When sorrow struck my family, I wanted Brother Wayne Williams to conduct the last rites. His remarks were always personal enough to bring warmth; the Scriptures he read brought peace; his quotations of poetry added sublimity, and his love of mankind added communion. So many of the young ministers of the Valley leaned on him as a "Father Adviser."

Recently when the fishing season opened, it didn't seem right at all not to see Brother Williams posed with Mr. Northcott and Governor Hodges. My good friend, Howard Willett, who is employed with the Veterans' hospital where Brother Williams died, remarked to me that he helped convey the remains from the hospital proper to the mortuary. He said, "Preacher Williams was a big man." I agree implicitly, Howard, Wayne Williams was a big man, physically, mentally and spiritually.

Chain of Kindness
We never know how some little deed of kindness may cause someone to keep our memory green. Many of us have missed the cheery presence of the late Ralph Brown. The memory of his kindness remained through the years. The kindness of someone to us when we are lonely and afraid stays with us. Even now, perhaps, your mind goes back to an incident when a friend in need was a friend, indeed. While we may not be able to repay the kindness directly, why don't we pass on the kindness to someone else? Thus we could have a chain of kindness that would soon extend far beyond our Valley walls.

Over the Years
I have a pet memory along those lines. When I was permitted to skip the fifth grade, the first day I walked into the sixth grade was an occasion of fear and trembling. The first remark I heard from some of the boys was, "What are you doing in here, you little old fish-grader you?" If I could have been an inch taller (they had them in all the desks then) my size would have saved me. Just when things looked unbearable, I was adopted by James Hyatt, who gave me the friendship I needed in that trying hour of readjustment. With years, James and I have grown apart in interests, but there remain a love and affection for him in my heart that shall abide. Sometime I should like to write at length on the topic, "The Young-est in the Class." Perhaps the experiences I had greatly affected my outlook on life. For one thing, I had to wrestle with an inferiority complex for years. For another, it infuriates me to see a big boy picking on a little one, or a boy who is strong in body but dull in mind giving an intelligent lad, who is a gentle fellow and who never "learned to fight," a bad time on the playground. In line with this I can hear the soft voice of the late Alf Tyson. I surely do miss him too, Cousin Sadie, as he remarked, "I was guilty of a knife-wielding bully on North Fork in the old days."

Labor of Love
Thank you, Pansy Willett, for the note about the thrift. I must by all means get out to see it. That bank of thrift brings back memories too. I scrounged around all over the neighborhood to get that thrift. Some of it came from my house, some from Aunt Maggie Allison's, some from Nell Morgan's and some from Hattie Burnett's. There were probably others that I may not recall on the spur of the moment. The very first we put out was tenderly placed by Mae Burnett, Minnie and Oden Walker and myself. Later Gene Burke and I really put in an afternoon of love, and I am happy to hear that it is pretty.

Church Work Crew
I have many memories about our church workings. Among those that stand out, I remember our efforts to construct a lawn at the little church across the North Fork valley. Lucius Cordell and his masterful stump-pulling, Maude and Blaine Morris bringing flat rocks for a walk, Claude McAfee supervising sodding operations, Thad Burnette striding around with a device that seeded the lawn, Oden pouring the concrete steps, George Pressley cleaning the ditches and placing the shovelful of earth on the shoulders of the road as delicately as any artist wielding a brush, "Little" Mack Burnett, helping on the belfry and the ladies washing windows, cleaning the church and "Setting Out The Food." I am not forgetting the wonderful work of Carl Patton, nor "That Stump" we kidded about for years.

Cross-Cuts and Cross Purposes
Later we cleaned up an area that we planned to add to our cemetery. This was one of George Williams' pet projects. On this project, I was a willing but ineffective worker. Ralph Burnett and Jim McAfee were using a cross-cut saw to cut a brush, "Little" Mack Burnett, I helped with the brush and then volunteered to help with the sawing. One of the cardinal sins in using a cross-cut saw is to bear down on the saw heavily enough to impede the smooth cutting of the saw teeth; this is called "riding the saw." I wasn't aware that I was guilty of this heinous crime until one of the above mentioned gentlemen pantingly and earnestly said to me, "Preacher, if you are going to ride, would you mind picking up your feet, so it won't be so hard to pull?" (I really don't see how these good people tolerated me as long as they did; I was always calling church workings and I wasn't a very talented worker myself. They were good days.)

I believe Sunday is wedding day for Gene Burke who is getting married in Puerto Rico. Gene played some outstanding football for our local high school. He also was a good, steady boy. I liked to work with him and get his outlook on life. I want to wish this fine amiable person the utmost happiness in life. The purest water flows from Nature's fountains. Isn't this a lovely time in the mountains?
