GOVERNOR—1960?
At the meeting of the YDC in Asheville last week end and Saturday at the legislative reception staged by the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, prior to the State-Carolina game, the gubernatorial candidates and their supporters were busier than bees.

John Larkins, Addison Hewlett, and Terry Sanford are letting no grass grow under their feet as they cross and criss-cross North Carolina in their search for votes come primary time next spring.

In addition to these three it was learned Saturday in Chapel Hill that Senator Arthur Kirkman of High Point not only sounds like a man running for governor but he is running with both feet as hard as he can. At present he is working on his platform which he'll reveal at the proper time.

The backers of Larkins, Hewlett, and Sanford were weaving in and out of the crowd shaking hands and telling all that their man is not only out to win but will carry three-fourths of the counties west of the Atlantic.

It promises to shape up as an interesting and close fight before the last ballot is counted and the winner announced.

WHAT HAPPENED?
Watching high school, college, and professional football you wonder what happened to the weaving, bobbing, dancing type of runners that used to be so much a part of the grid scene each fall.

There is no one in football, in my opinion, who can match the footwork of Charlie Justice, Gene McEver, Buddy Hackman, Johnny Branch, Jack McDowell, Dixie Roberts, Red Grange; and others that not many of the younger fans will remember.

Today the backs, speeded through the line by the T formation and the brush block, run either straight ahead or swing wide. "They either run around you or over you" one avid fan remarked. "It seems that broken field running is almost a thing of the past." That started me to thinking and I am almost ready to agree. In the day before the T and its variations became so popular, when the single wing, double wing, Notre Dame shift and box formations were the style, a team was not complete without at least one back who could carry the mail through a broken field. That was the day of the quick kick, the "pass, punt, and pray" type of offense, when the blockers knocked their victim down and sat on him if he needed be in order to spring their man into the open where he was on his own.

Which is best? You could argue all day about that and still not reach any conclusion. Each had and has its place. There are signs that the emphasis may shift from the T to a more open style of play, but there again that depends on the material. The coach must plan his offense to fit the boys he has available at any given time. There is no doubt that they are doing pretty well with the T.

Life is a four letter word, so is Slow.
