A reprint from the News & Observer (Raleigh) Editorial Page of August 31.—Heinz Rollman.

Hair-Splitting

Democrat-turned-Republican Heinz Rollman, who has done his share of political maneuvering in an effort to find a political home in North Carolina, found this week that Congress can sometimes maneuver with hair-splitting precision.

The House Administration Committee said Rollman couldn't contest the election of 12th District Rep. Roy A. Taylor because Rollman notified Taylor of his intentions by registered mail instead of in person.

The committee noted that Rollman had a chance to notify Taylor in person because Taylor returned to the district after he was sworn in at Washington July 2. How the committee expected Rollman to know this is beyond comprehension.

Certainly Taylor himself couldn't be expected to keep the determined Rollman informed as to his whereabouts.

Taylor himself said he wasn't notified that his special election to fill out the late David Hogg's term was being contested by Rollman within the stipulated time.

Maybe that is legislative reason enough but if the committee's reasons for turning Rollman down are only the reasons given, Rollman should be allowed to contest the election with all his might if not to his heart's content.

One of our star baseball players, Anthony Stafford, called me Monday saying that the Black Mtn. Sluggers had defeated the Swannanoa team Labor Day at the Perlier ball field at Brookside. This was the last game of the season and Coach Marvin Hamilton, who made it possible for the players to play in the Brookside area, by furnishing transportation, hopes for a better team next year. We wish to thank also Mr. and Mrs. Perlier for the use of the ball field during the summer months.

Several days ago an elderly man in Black Mtn. talked with me about the importance of good leadership in churches and community affairs; and I firmly agree that good leaders make a community.

He also stated that in his opinion Dave Jones of the Brookside area was one of the best spiritual leaders he had ever known. Some of the things he asked me about Dave I didn't know, but I promised him that I would have something to say about Dave in this weeks News. First of all, Dave was born in Jones county; he lost his father at the age of 14, and had to work in the fields to support his family. After the age of 18 Dave started working in the saw mills continuing to support his family until he went into bad health. Dave came to Black Mountain April 25, 1917, to regain his health, and after staying one year here he was called to the armed services. After being discharged in 1919 Dave married Miss Zennie Logan and moved to his home on the hill.

After two years of marriage he joined the Mills Chapel Baptist church in 1923, and was ordained Deacon in 1924. He has since served as chairman of Deacon Board, treasurer, choir leader, and Bible teacher. Dave started teaching the Bell White Bible class in 1928 and is still teacher of the class.

For many years Dave operated a first class transfer business in and around Black Mountain and enjoyed the patronage of all people.

He is also a loyal, liberal, and regular supporter of the Baptist Assembly at East Flat Rock. He has never failed in this great work. At the regular session of the Mud Creek Baptist association several years back, he was elected a member of the executive board and his influence for good has been much in evidence.

He is a veteran of World War I and an inspiration to all who know him.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Rhodes and family of Asheville were guests of the Albert Harper on Labor Day.
