The Mars Hill band gave a 45 minute concert at Owen Monday morning.

Juniors Place Order for Rings

The event of year, at least as far as the members of the Junior class are concerned, is the placing of the order for the Senior rings which will be delivered next fall, early in their senior year. It is a time of much excitement and the anticipation is matched only by that which precedes their arrival next fall.

Seniors Interviewed

Members of the senior class were interviewed on Friday, March 17 and interviews concluded on Tuesday, March 21, by Mr. Penland of the North Carolina Employment service to discuss with the boys and girls suitable vocation areas.

Those of the senior class who do not expect to attend college next fall were interviewed with the idea of their availability for labor after graduation. This does not mean that those interviewed will automatically be listed for available jobs, but it does mean that their names will be filed and upon application for a job following graduation, they will be considered for suitable va-

Last summer she was active in the youth recreation program where she taught an art class for any youngsters who wished to study with her. Many took advantage of the opportunity and are looking forward to the privilege again this summer.

For those who do art work, the following classifications, by groups, is given, so that when contest time comes next year, students will know in which group to enter their work: (1) portrait group; (2) design group (including decorative and abstract work); (3) illustration group, either realistic subjects or imaginary themes; (4) representative group, includes either local scenes, not copied, still life, or objective subjects such as animals, trees, boats, etc.; and (5) draftsmanship group, which would embrace any outstanding line work in pencil, pen or ink, paint or silk screen, woodcut lineoleum cuts, etc.

In addition to the division by groups, the size of the picture is important. No picture can be less than 10x14.
