Marines Offer Opportunities

"Looking to the future is a hobby enjoyed by all men. Of primary importance to most men is their formal education and the advancement of their careers." GySgt. C. A. Johnson Jr., local Marine recruiter, announced today that men seeking to continue their formal education and obtain a career with a future now have an opportunity of joining the Marines today, but remain at home for up to 120 days.
 The 120-day Delay Enlistment program, according to the sergeant, affords the young man a chance to join the Marines today, but remain at home and leave at any day of his choosing within the 120-day period.
 By enlisting under this option the Marines will not lose any prospectives for Marine schools or the advantages of continuing his formal education through the Marine Corps Institute or off-duty education.

You are required to make defence to such pleading not later than the 27th day of July, 1961, and upon your failure to do so, the parties seeking service against you will apply to the court for the relief sought.
 This 25th day of May, 1961.

Mountain Musings
 by Gene Byrd

Back To School We Go:
 The Muser and about twenty-two of the nicest folks imaginable are taking a course in guidance and counseling this summer. The course is extension work from Western Carolina College and is being taught at David Millard Junior High School in Asheville by Dr. Mary Wayte.
 The course has its practical values for me. Combined with the other graduate work I took this spring, my North Carolina certificate should be protected for a goodly duration; not only that, I shall be placed in a top bracket in the school system that I shall be entering this fall.
 The wonderful part is that I am thoroughly enjoying the course. I love to go to school. If I could figure some way to increase it, I would stay out of teaching this year and get my long desired Master's degree.) The people taking the course are very congenial, wholesome people, and the material in the course is practical and challenging. However the instructor is the chief attraction of the course. Dr. Mary Wayte certainly carries the years she admits most graciously. Her winsome personality, case histories, and flashes of humor make the course come alive. Almost she convinces the Muser to become a convert to guidance and counseling as a career.

There's only two men in the class. For a while I thought I was going to be the best looking man in the class until Bobby Poore, who taught at Erwin last year, came along and deprived me of the honor. Many of us have been teaching school for a number of years, but there is a youthful zestfulness in the class that makes the time go by quickly. Laugh, dear former pupils, laugh, I'm having to do home work, write themes, read magazine articles and next Friday we shall have a test. Looks as if my chickens are coming home to roost.

Speaking of chickens roosting, you should see the intricate maneuvers I go through to adjust to a junior high school desk, getting in, sitting in and getting out. A person with my educational background... well, it isn't easy! Ruth Twitty is the only teacher residing in Black Mountain that is taking the course; I am proud of her contributions to the course.
 Mrs. Jewel McDaniels is the only teacher from Owen in the class, and her kind personality makes her an outstanding student.

I am making many contacts and acquiring much knowledge that I am sure will be most helpful. Meanwhile, two weeks that I rather dreaded are turning into a most pleasing interlude. The Bear Went Under The Mountain:
 I don't particularly like tunnels. The other morning on the way to school I went plunging into the Bear River Tunnel to discover the lights were not turned on. That was the darkest dark!
 It made me think of a trip to Washington before the War;

(No, Burselon, not the Civil War, World War Two) that was chaperoned and guided by the late Mrs. J. P. Ashely. I was investigated into going along, and I really didn't put up much resistance. Among other things we descended into the depths of the Luray Caverns. The guides had a scheme for giving us our money's worth. At a pre-arranged signal, the lights went out. Total, abysmal, velvety, suffocating darkness pressed down upon us. For a moment, I was panic-stricken. Thoughts of Floyd Collins raced through my head.
 Just think dear Readers, there I was in total darkness surrounded by beautiful young ladies and me an unattached gay young blade. Guess what my next thought was? (It was not) I thought, "If I ever was out of this place, alive, you'll not catch me in any more caverns."
 Another Statistic:
 Technically, I have never been born. That may explain a lot of things. North Carolina wasn't doing the job on vital statistics in 1916 that they are currently. I decided I had better get a birth certificate issued while there were a few people older than I to attest to the time of birth. So I merrily hied to the second floor of the County Courthouse to get from Mrs. Walser, who I heartily recommend to other legal "unborns".
 This good lady, 73 years young, almost caused a scandal on the second floor of the courthouse. When she asked me how old I presently was, I meekly answered that I was forty-four.
 "Humph!", she said, "You don't look that old."
 She doesn't know, fortunately, how close she came to being hugged out of sheer gratitude.
 Talk about Bryl Cream being dangerous. You just tell somebody past forty, they don't look their age and stand back!

Delayed:
 Last week, due to lack of space, I didn't tell about Father's Day as it applied to me. It was a wonderful day; Judy and Johnny, accompanied by the Millers, came down from Boone, attended church with us, joined us in a picnic at the farm and a buffet supper at home and by coming helped make the day a happier one.
 I got some nice presents such as a hat, two nice shirts and, of all hints, a pair of leather WORK GLOVES.
 I thought of Papa most fondly, and I know the day was difficult for my wife; it was her first Father's Day without her wonderful Daddy. Memories are bitter-sweet!

With The Readers:
 Belle Hamilton, that was a wonderful thought. Thank you so very much.
 Dick Morrow, "Old buddy, I love you. Yes, I was a fixture in educational circles here, but a little confusion rose as to the proper use of some fixtures. Savvy?"
 Dear Readers of historical bent, I visited the courthouse and compiled a list of the taxpayers in Upper Swannanoa Township (evidently Black Mountain's name before the use of Gray Eagle) in the year 1858. I plan to use this list in next week's column; we'll go ancestor hunting together.
 A Little Startling:
 I have a feeling that many of my Readers will share in the thought of this weeks poetic effort. I wonder how many of you, who have lost loved ones, have been startled by someone in the distance that bore a remarkable resemblance to the dear departed. Perhaps your inner mind tried to tell you that all your sadness was only a dream, and then Reality asserted itself.

As I Passed, By
 He stood alone at the crossing
 Stoopd and very gray.
 My heartstrings vibrated oddly.
 As I passed by yesterday
 I almost thought it was Papa
 Who also became stooped and gray.
 I envied the ones who claimed him
 As I passed by yesterday.
 "God bless you dear old man
 My Daddy has gone away.
 Benediction rose and choked me
 As I passed by yesterday.
 "I hope you have children to love you;
 You roused fond memory today."
 Papa was back and riding beside me
 As I passed by yesterday.
 Post-Script:
 I want to congratulate Mary Hauth on the effective writing about her dog, William Tell. This was an unusually heart warming, heart-tugging literary effort. Somehow, I was reminded of Odin Walker at his best. I choked-up as I read this fine work; keep it up, neighbor.
