Back-Packing Can Be Fun

by Anne Stubbs

People do different things in the summer. Some rest at home, some work, some go on trips, and some go on back-packing. Four Girl Scouts from Black Mountain, along with three other Scouts, Sylvia Pratt, Jane Wright, and Mimi Rollman, and our leader, Tania Rollman, chose something a little different. Melinda Fortune, Bobbie Miller, Dede Styles, and Anne Stubbs went "back-packing in the Smokies". For a week we lived at the Cataloochee camp grounds in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

Two days and nights, Tuesday and Wednesday, were spent hiking along trails through the mountains. Everything we needed was carried on packs on our backs, the dehydrated food, clothes, tents, equipment. During this time we were entirely dependent upon ourselves and the forest. Sometimes it seemed as though the forest failed us. On Tuesday, the eight of us were unable to find water. That night

CDR Paul Kissling and his wife LCDR Esther Kissling are spending a few days at their home on First street prior to his going to Little Creek, Va., for a new assignment. She will be stationed at the Naval hospital in Portsmouths.

we camped in the damp woods without supper, for water was needed to cook the dehydrated food. The next morning we left camp without breakfast, and with one sick girl.

The next half-hour was spent hiking and hoping for water. When we found those two small streams, they were worth more to us than all the money in the world. For three hours we cooked and ate a delicious "brunch" and washed our dirty feet, legs, and hands.

The rest of the day was spent hiking to Pretty Hollow Gap. The walking wasn't as hard as it had been, for we were on the top of a mountain. When we reached the gap, we decided to hike back to Cataloochee instead of the previously planned 30-mile hike to Davenport Gap. The next four miles were downhill and the trail was terribly muddy. Our feet were one a mass of blisters by this time. We soaked them in the first stream we came to. The cold water felt wonderful!

Our base camp had never hiked. Even the downpour couldn't dampen our spirits. (We were used to rain by now. There had been so much of it we practically had to swim around camp.) When the sun looked so good as it did Thursday after the 20-mile began to shine that afternoon, we could hardly recognize it. Soon everyone was washing clothes and the dirt we ourselves had collected during the past two days. Bobbie Miller had a little something extra to wash. She slipped down the muddy bank while going to the creek.

The next day we took a four-mile hike along a lovely trail just for pleasure. The trail wound from one side of the stream to the other. In 2.3 miles we crossed 18 slippery log bridges. It was on this hike that we added to our list of wildlife we had seen. So far the list included snakes, quail, and squirrels. As we trudged along the trail, we heard a loud crash above us. Sylvia Pratt started yelling "A bear, a bear!" we all tried to get a glimpse of it but we had frightened the poor creature away.

We left Saturday after being there since Sunday. All of us had enjoyed it but we were ready to start the long trip home. Even now, we eight are still resting our backs and nursing our tired, sore feet.

Sen. Erwin Says:

WASHINGTON—Hearings have been held on appropriations for North Carolina water projects by the Senate Subcommittee in Public Works. Senator Jordan and I recently appeared before the seventeen mittee in support of Carolina projects of which fourteen are for surveys and studies connected with the development of our rivers and harbors, flood control, navigation and erosion prevention.

The progress of North Carolina is vitally connected with the protection and development of the State's number one natural resource—water. The amount we requested for these public works is $3,149,800.

Mallory Rule Change Urged

On June 13th, I introduced a bill to make voluntary admissions and confessions in criminal proceedings and prosecutions in the courts of the District of Columbia admissible against defendants. The rising tide of crime within the District of Columbia points up the need for legislation to clarify the Supreme Court's ruling of 1957 in the Mallory case. That ruling held inadmissible the voluntary statement of a convicted and self-confessed rapist because of the delay in taking him before a committing magistrate. The Mallory ruling and a prior decision in the McNabb case have resulted in abolishing an old and fundamental rule of evidence regarding the admissibility of a confession. The old rule was that if a confession was freely and voluntarily made it was deemed trustworthy. In the Mallory decision the Supreme Court held that a delay of 7½ hours in arraigning the prisoner against the confession is inadmissible as evidence against him under the Supreme Court's interpretation of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. I submit that when Congress wrote the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure it had no intention of losing convicted murderers and rapists upon a hapless public merely because a police officer failed to take a prisoner before a committing magistrate before the lapse of 7½ hours. It is for this reason that I introduced this bill to make voluntary admissions and confessions admissible in criminal proceedings and prosecutions in the courts of the United States and the District of Columbia.
