REFLECTIONS

Teenage — 10 Commandments

1. Stop and think before you drink.
2. Don't let your parents down; they brought you up.
3. Be humble enough to obey. You will be giving orders yourself, some day.
4. At the first moment turn away from unclean thinking—at the first moment.
5. Don't show off driving. If you want to race go to Indianapolis.
6. Choose a date who would make a good mate.
7. Go to church faithfully. The Creator gives you the week; give Him back an hour.
8. Choose your companions carefully. You are what they are.
9. Avoid following the crowd. Be an engineer—not a cabbage.
10. Or even better—keep the original Ten Commandments.

If you were about to give me credit for writing or thinking this up, don't. Frankly I stole it from the column of Don Pauschert, a former boss of mine in Illinois. In fact I have taken quite a few items from his columns during the years since we landed in Black Mountain.

And since he goes to Florida every winter or spring for a long vacation and is scared to drive over the hills to Black Mountain, I have no fear of reprisal. In spite of all we've written and said in an attempt to lure him and his charming wife to the sunny side of the Smokies, all efforts have been in vain. They continue to drive down U. S. 41 and over the level route to the land of Sunshine.

NOT THE SAME AS DAILY

It was several years ago that I walked into the office of the boss' semi-weekly newspaper, (published Monday and Thursday, and we published three other weekly newspapers on Thursday and Friday) and went to work.

Being fresh off a daily newspaper and young enough to think I had the final word in publishing, I was ready to show them how things were done.

But it didn't work out that way. Truth is they showed me many things during the 16 months (interrupted by some 30 months' service with the army during the war) spent there.

It was there that I first learned that one didn't quit and go down to the drug store when all the copy is in the way one did on the daily, but that the job wasn't done until the copy was set, read, and printed, and the papers delivered to the post office.

—R—

JOB WITH MANY ANGLES!

Shortly after I arrived at the semi-weekly, the boss laid aside his quills one day and quietly walked out without saying where he was going or when he would be back. The next time we saw him he was dressed in kakkhi.

After that I became advertising manager, sports editor, feature writer, circulation assistant, and on Monday and Thursday it fell my lot to stamp the names on what is known around a newspaper office as the single wraps.

Add to this an imposing title of assistant to the publisher and you have a pretty good idea of what I did to keep busy.

But this didn't last too long. Uncle Sam was calling and hating to say no, I didn't.

Prior to leaving I turned far over in what was called the advertising book and wrote a message to the editor in the hope that he would find it some day. He did. It was almost a year later that he turned the page and found the note. He immediately tore it out and mailed it to me with a letter of his own. In the European Theater even my own handwriting looked good.

—R—

GRATEFUL FOR HELP

Frankly, there were many times during my early days in the weekly field when I wanted to go back to the daily where things were rush rush at times but quiet and serene when the deadlines had passed.

In fact at times I wished to be back on my daily job, handling the telegraph news on the pony service, which is as unpopular with newsmen as the obit column.

But the fellows at Pana were patient and overlooked my mistakes, which were plenty. This, as much as anything else, caused me to remain in the weekly field. Seeing a new man start to break into the newspaper business always brings back my experience. After having made all the mistakes in the book and many to spare, I can sympathize with anyone trying to keep from tearing his hair and biting his nails when the details start piling up.

But it's a regular job, and you meet so many nice people. What else can you ask?

—R—

MEMORIAL DAY

One thing hard to get used to in the midwest was the observance of Memorial Day. It was nice because everything closed tight as a drum and we got a holiday, but it was a long time before I found out why.

—R—

A TIMELY MESSAGE

"Slow me down LORD,—I'm going too fast, I can't see my BROTHER when he's walking past, I miss a lot of GOOD things day by day, I don't know a BLESSING when it comes my way."
"Slow me down LORD, I want to see More of the things that are GOOD for me;
A little LESS of me,—and a lot more of YOU,
I want the HEAVENLY atmosphere to trickle through."
"Let me help a BROTHER when the going is rough,
When FOLKS work together, Life isn't so tough;
Slow me down LORD,—so I can talk
With some of your ANGELS,—slow me down to a WALK."

Telephone Talk

by WILLIAM R. COOKE, JR.
Your Telephone Manager

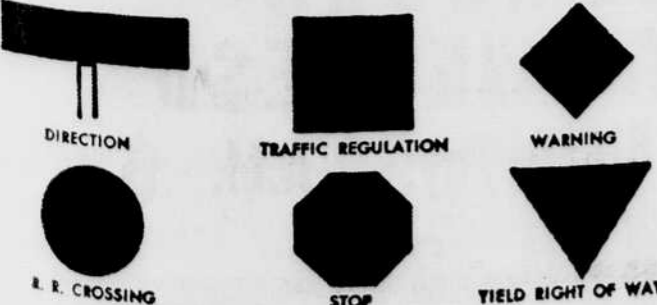

LIKE FLICKING ON THE LIGHTS or turning on the water, we take for granted the everyday miracle of the telephone. Ever stop to wonder what goes into the "instrument" that makes all those conversations possible? In every telephone there are 472 separate parts ... 60 different raw materials. Overall Bell System statistics are even more impressive. 7,600,000 new sets manufactured last year used 19,000,000 pounds of steel, 10,000,000 pounds of plastic, 2,000,000 pounds of aluminum, over 1,000,000 pounds of copper and brass. And that's a lot of telephone!

THE BRILLIANT MRS. BELL ... according to a new biography "Make A Joyful Sound," Mrs. Alexander Graham Bell was an extraordinary woman in her own right. "Mrs. Bell was as great a woman as Dr. Bell was a man. Despite her deafness she was exceedingly well informed on scientific matters. And, although history hasn't paid much attention to the fact, her creative talents seemed scarcely less brilliant than Bell's himself." The book, published by Macrae Smith Company of Philadelphia, tells of Dr. Bell's personal life, his diversified work in many fields, and of the remarkable woman who was his wife.

JUNE IS BRIDE MONTH, and along with trousseau, reception and honeymoon planning, there's a lot of "new home" planning. With the help of a telephone company representative, smart brides and grooms see that their new homes are "well-telephoned." Home Interphones, Bell Chimes, extensions ... all these make for happy, efficient homes ... old and new!

CAREFUL DRIVING the year-round makes good sense. This month, when out-of-school children begin popping up in unexpected places, careful driving is even more of a necessity. How many of these traffic symbols do you know? We should know, and observe, all these signs of safety.
