23 Years Deaf Lesson for July 8, 1962

THE woods were full of prophets back in times when the nation of Judah was plunging to its doom. For every single true prophet there must have been scores if not hundreds of false prophets. Now when different men see different pictures of the future, how shall we know which is telling the truth and which is just "seeing things"? Dr. Foreman Readers of the Bible are inclined to blame the people of Israel for not paying attention to the prophets who spoke to them in the name and with the message of God. We think we could not have been so foolish as those people were. But we can't throw too many stones. We have to remember that the true prophets were in a small minority, and also that the false prophets said what people wanted to hear. Isn't it true today that we would rather listen to cheerful predictions than gloomy What is God Doing?

In times of deep trouble, such as war or other disaster, a common question especially among religious people is: What is God doing? Why doesn't he stop these disasters? Now there are some calamities which we can be saved from only if we ourselves do something about it. God will not save us from just any jam we care to get into. Those long-ago Israelites, for example, had plenty of warning. Jeremiah and others too had told them and told them again, just what was going to be, unless the nation radically changed its ways. Read the ter-rible 19th chapter, where Jere-miah predicts that these elegant city people will end by becoming cannibals, out of sheer desperate starvation. God says: "I will break this city so that it cannot be mended." Through Jeremiah

God draws an accurate picture of exactly how God will bring this to Why No Believers? Twenty-three years is a long time. Jeremiah began to preach when he was only a youth, let us say around twenty or so. He was a middle-aged man when finally the storm came. But in 23 years no one had listened. Yet (said Jeremiah) though "I have spoken persistently unto you, you have neither listened, nor inclined your ears to hear,"—that is to say, they hadn't heard and didn't want to hear the truth.

Why this fatal, this suicidal, willful deafness on the nation's part? It was partly, as already said, that they did not like to hear what they considered gloomy, doomy predictions. They liked to think that if they were just cheerful enough, circumstances would change to match their mood. But there was something else more deep-reaching. Jere-miah made it plain over and over (so often that he himself wearied of his own preaching and wished he could stop, even wished he had never been born)—made it plain that the nation was not such that it could make a valid claim on God. You could put it in two sentences: The people said, "We are God's people, he won't let us get hurt; while Jeremiah said, "God's people? You don't act like

What was needed, in God's sight, was not a change in the place of worship. King Josiah had "reformed" the state religion that far; but a hypocrite's worship is just as distasteful to the God of righteousness in one place as another. In one of Jeremiah's famous sermons (chap. 7) he warns against bragging that they had the one true Temple. What God really desires is a people who practice justice between man and

The voice of many a preacher summons proud America in these days to repent. But now as then it is a mistake to think of sin as just personal faults. The sins of society, dishonesty and greed in political and social and economic life, are more far-reaching and just as fatal in undermining a nation's character and strength, as are purely individual sins. Let no one claim that social justice is merely "political"! To say that, you will have to be as deaf to Jeremiah now as his doomed people were then.
